Olympic Games Continue Despite Tragic, Fanatical Attack

MUNICH (AP) — Authorities counted 17 persons dead today as a result of Arab terrorism and police action growing out of the Arabs' raid on Olympic Village. The dead included 11 men from the Israeli team at the Olympics, 5 terrorists and a West German policeman.

The Olympics were ordered to continue, resuming late today. Avery Brundage, the Olympic chief, said: "We cannot allow a handful of terrorists to destroy this nucleus of international cooperation and good will that we have in the Olympic movement. The games must go on."

Two of the Israeli team members, a coach and an athlete, died in the first outburst of terrorism when Arab terrorists invaded the Israeli quarters Tuesday. The other deaths came when a gun battle erupted at an airfield 20 miles from Munich as the terrorists and their Israeli hostages were ostensibly bound for a flight abroad.

Three Arabs were captured. A German helicopter pilot was seriously wounded.

The Olympic competitions are resuming at this point at which they were suspended Tuesday afternoon. That pushes each day's schedule back 24 hours — the closing ceremony will be held Monday instead of Sunday.

The Israeli team's 18 surviving members will leave for home Thursday. They would have left today, "but we couldn't make arrangements in time," an official said.

The guerrilla invasion of the Olympic village early Tuesday ended late that night in a gun battle at a military airfield 20 miles northwest of Munich in which a West German policeman and five of the terrorists also were killed, a German helicopter pilot was seriously wounded and the other three Arabs were captured.

In the confusion of the night, one terrorist was believed to have escaped, but his body was found at the air base this morning.

The Arabs killed two Israelis when they first invaded their quarters in the Olympic village at dawn Tuesday and took nine other members of the team hostage. Five hours later Brundage suspended the late afternoon and evening sports events.

After an ambush of the terrorists backfired and the Arabs killed the nine hostages, the IOC said it would meet after the memorial service and decide whether to terminate the games for the first time in modern Olympic history. Five days of events remain.

The West Germans, who had hoped for the Munich games to erase the Nazi-era image of the 1936 Berlin games, were shattered by the tragedy.

Chancellor Willy Brandt in a television address said: "The joyous games are over. In the coming days we will have to prove ourselves anew."

The Olympic Village resembled a besieged camp today. It was ringed with police and armored cars, and flags flew at half staff.

Security measures at airports and other key facilities in West Germany and other European countries were tightened as authorities feared new guerrilla action in an attempt to force the release of the three captives.

Armed with submachine guns, the Arabs broke into the Israeli team's quarters before dawn Tuesday, killing the wrestling coach and a weightlifter. They demanded the release of 200 Arab terrorists imprisoned in Israel and a plane to take the raiding squad to an Arab country.

A number of the team members escaped through back doors and windows, but throughout the day the Arabs held nine men captive while they negotiated with West German officials.

Apparently some sort of agreement was reached with the terrorists early in the evening convincing them that they would be flown with the hostages to Cairo. Under heavy police guard, the Arabs led the Israelis from the building blindfolded, linked together with rope, their hands tied.

A bus ferried the guerrillas and the hostages to two waiting helicopters, and these took them to the Fuerstenfeldbruck air base of the West German air force.

The helicopters landed about 10:30 p.m., and witnesses gave this account of the battle that followed:

Two of the Arabs stepped from a helicopter to inspect a waiting Boeing 727 jetliner. German sharpshooters waiting in ambush opened fire but hit only one of the Arabs.

The other terrorists started shooting the Israelis. One of the Arabs blew himself up with a hand grenade, setting one of the hostages afire. Some of the hostages were trapped inside. Firetrucks attempting to approach to rescue them were driven back by fire from the Arabs.

By the time the Arab resistance was ended, all nine Israelis were dead.

The Bavarian state interior minister, Bruno Merck, said there had been no intention of letting the Arabs take off with the hostages for Cairo. He explained "this would have been certain death" for the Israelis, and "we had to take a chance and attempt to free the hostages."

Merck also indicated that the Egyptians had refused to let the plane land in Cairo.

A spokesman for the West

German government, Conrad Ahlers, said Brandt had tried to reach President Anwar Sadat of Egypt by telephone to ask him to intercede with the terrorists. He could not reach Sadat and talked instead with the Egyptian premier, but "he was not helpful," Ahler said.

The terrorists were from the Black September organization, a Palestinian group formed in late 1971 to avenge the deaths of Palestinians killed by King Hussein's troops in Jordan.

Meanwhile, in Washington, President Nixon, after bolstering security against terrorist attacks on Israeli citizens, ordered Secretary of State William P. Rogers today to consult other governments "on an urgent basis" to find ways to halt terrorism.

White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon summoned Rogers and presidential advisor Henry Kissinger to a 75-minute early morning meeting in his office to discuss measures following the international drama of politics and violence at the Olympic Village.

'Day of Mourning' Proclaimed

MUNICH (UPI) — Avery Brundage, proclaiming this "day of mourning" for 11 Israeli team members killed on Tuesday, announced today the Olympic Games will go on.

Brundage, addressing a memorial service at the Olympic Stadium attended by over 80,000, said the Olympic program will be resumed with "all events one day later than scheduled," which meant the Games would close Monday instead of Sunday.

The IOC head, who retires at the end of these Games, showed all his old fire and spirit as he called for a renewal of the Olympic ideal.

The 84-year old Brundage, his voice shaking with emotion as he addressed the throng, called for the Games "to go on" with renewed efforts "to keep them clean, honest and pure."

And then he wound up his brief address in English by saying:

"We declare today to be a day of mourning. We will continue all the events one day later than scheduled."

With the huge Olympic flag and the flags of the competing nations, flying at half-staff, Brundage delivered an emotional, bitter attack against those who would reduce the Olympic ideal.

"Every civilized person recoils in horror," Brundage said. "Sadly in this imperfect world as the Olympic Games become more open, they've come under more political pressure and now this savage attack.

"We have twice been subjected to attacks in these Games. We lost the Rhodesian battle to naked political blackmail.

"I am sure the public will agree we cannot allow this act of terrorism to destroy this nucleus of cooperation and goodwill."

Brundage was the last of five persons to address the ceremonies, also attended by representatives of the competing nations who overflowed the more than 2,000 seats set up for them on the infield grass of Olympic stadium.

German Olympic Committee President Willie Daume, West German president Gustav Heinemann, Israel's Ambassador to Germany Ben Horim and Shmuel Lalkin, chief of the Israeli Olympic delegation, also spoke.

But it was Brundage, his voice cracking, who made it clear such acts would not destroy the Olympics.

Sitting in the first three rows of the infield chairs, were the surviving members of the team from Israel, all wearing the traditional yarmulkas. That delegation will immediately fly back to their homeland with the bodies of the victims.

"The athletes of Israel hope to continue in (future) Olympic competition in a spirit of brotherhood and fairness despite this abominable crime," Lalkin said. "It is in deep sorrow that we now leave."

"Eleven days ago in this stadium, on this same spot, I opened the 20th Olympic Games in Munich.

"They began as truly happy games in the true Olympic spirit. They continued as such until this shadow of darkness passed over us.

"The responsibility lies with the countries who do not put a stop to these activities. In the name of the Federal Republic of Germany, I appeal to the people of the world to overcome hatred."

Israel Reels With Shock

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel newspapers and officials today criticized West German security at the Olympic Games and the papers demanded revenge from the Arab world for the killing of Israeli athletes at Munich.

Premier Golda Meir's cabinet met in emergency session for the second consecutive day.

The nation reeled with shock over the killing of 11 of the 29 members of its Olympic team. Only hours earlier, Mrs. Meir had drunk a cognac toast and the Jewish state had rejoiced over premature reports from Germany that nine Israeli hostages had been rescued.

Later came the terse official statement: "The government of Israel announces in profound sorrow that 11 members of the Israeli Olympic delegation have been murdered by Arab terrorists."

Newscasters' voices cracked as they told the country of the massacre. Radio Israel's usual gay breakfast music was replaced by the funeral march from Beethoven's Eroica Symphony.

Even while Israel thought the hostages were safe, newspapers called for reprisals.

"War to the end against these murderous organizations, their members, supporters and dispatchers, wherever they may be," urged the newspaper Davar.

"As far as Israel is concerned this is an act of war, not only by members of the terrorist organizations, but also by those Arab countries whose support for the murderous terrorists made possible this deed."

"... If they do not now eliminate the terrorist bases within their borders, Israel will undertake the task," Davar said.

Al Hamishmar blamed West Germany.

"Responsibility falls on the German hosts of the Olympic Games who undertook full responsibility for the safety of Israeli sportsmen. They have failed ignominiously, and must account for their failure," it said.

Hatzofeh said: "The surrender of the German government in the past to terrorist extortion has prepared the ground for terrorist activity on German territory."

Yosef Burg, interior minister, said the name of Munich would now compare with that of Dachau, the nearby World War II concentration camp where countless Jews were massacred by Nazi Germans.

Man Is Nabbed in Gun Ring Probe

ALLEGED FIREARMS CONTRABAND

KINGSTON — An intensive investigation that was launched several weeks ago by federal authorities, the Ulster County Sheriff's department and Kingston and South Egremont, Mass. police, in an effort to crack an alleged stolen gun ring, has resulted in the arrest of a Town of Ulster man.

The coordinated probe stemmed from burglaries at The Jug End Resort in the Massachusetts community of South Egremont in April and May that netted loot consisting of 72 rifles and shotguns, according to police reports.

The recovery of five of the guns allegedly taken from the Jug End led to the arrest of Lou Christofor, 51, of 187 Miller's Lane Extension, Tuesday afternoon by Investigator Harold T. Bowers of the sheriff's department and four federal agents.

Bowers, who directed the local probe with Sheriff William B. Martin and Chief Julius M. Glassman of Kingston, in cooperation with Chief Charles M. Seiger Jr., of South Egremont, said Christofor, who allegedly sold four guns to area residents several weeks ago, was paroled in his own custody following his arrest and he was scheduled to appear today before U.S. Commissioner John B. Garrity in Poughkeepsie when he is expected to post a bail of $2,500.

Christofor is accused specifically of violating Title 18, U. S. Code, Section 922J, which accused him of selling stolen firearms "that had been moved in interstate commerce," according to Bowers.

The five guns involved in the case here reportedly surrendered by the purchasers after they had made statements to authorities allegedly identifying resident who may have purchased rifles or shotguns at bargain prices, should voluntarily surrender them to either the sheriff's department or city police to avoid possible court action.

Bowers said additional arrests are anticipated. It was learned that another area man is expected to surrender to authorities soon through his attorney. According to Bowers, the two burglaries at the Jug End Resort in South Egremont are still under investigation and according to available reports only the five guns confiscated here are the only ones recovered by authorities. The other 67 are still unaccounted for, Bowers noted.

In addition to firearms, a report of Chief Seiger noted that other loot stolen in the burglary at the Resort on April 22 included two cases of Remington ammunition 28 gauge target load; one case of Remington ammo 410 gauge target load; two cases of Winchester ammo 12 gauge skeet load, 18 cases of Western White Flyer clay pigeons — 135 per case, and one tool box color green. South Egremont police in a report to the sheriff's office here noted that fresh footprints and prints of motor vehicle tires were found in mud in the immediate vicinity of the burglarized resort on the morning of the April break-in.

Chief Seiger's report also noted that it appeared that the person, or persons, who took part in the resort burglaries used either a truck or a station wagon with wide tires similar to snow tires, to cart away the loot.

UCCC Faculty Files Charges

By JON POWERS

STONE RIDGE — Bad faith bargaining charges have been filed against the Ulster County Legislature by the Ulster County Community College Faculty Association, following an abortive "negotiating session" Tuesday night.

The bad faith charges were filed with the Public Employees Relations Board (PERB) in Albany this morning, according to Faculty Association president Allen Duane. Similar charges were filed in 1970.

Although teachers still do not have a contract for 1972-73, UCCC will open its doors to students Thursday morning for the start of the fall semester. Duane said the teachers will be at their jobs Thursday.

After the faculty strike at UCCC in 1970, the Faculty Association filed bad faith charges against the county. PERB ruled that the county had bargained in bad faith, and that their actions instigated the teachers strike.

Duane said he expects a similar ruling this time, as well. The two sides in the contract dispute met for the first time Tuesday night since the fact finder issued his report two weeks ago. According to Duane, the county's negotiating team demanded that he first meet privately with Legislator Brian White (R-Dist. 9) to discuss their positions. Duane said he told White in that private session that the teachers were willing to "come down" from their latest demands. The two then returned to the negotiating room where, according to Duane, White abruptly adjourned the session.

White could not be reached for comment today. He has refused to comment on the negotiations since they began in March.

Duane told The Freeman today that he now fully expects the county to impose a contract on the teachers through a legislative hearing.

But Duane added that the teachers will "fight" a legislative hearing. He said that faculty members will remain on the job until the legislative hearing is called, and will then decide what further course of action to take. Another strike at the college has been threatened by some quarters.

Duane repeated today that the teachers are willing to meet "anytime, anywhere" to negotiate a settlement, but he added that the teachers will demand, in the future, that all negotiating sessions be opened to the press and public.

Shriver: 'Sanctions May Increase Terror'

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Campaigning under the shadow of mass political murder at the Olympic games, Sargent Shriver has told angry Jewish students that sanctions against Arab states might increase terrorist activities rather than decrease them.

Leapfrogging from Boston in early morning to Portland, Maine, to Springfield, Mass., to Albany, the Democratic vice presidential candidate pressed his attack on President Nixon, saying Nixon presides over an "unethical" administration and has received campaign contribution "payoffs" from the U.S. oil industry.

But hanging over the day was the course of events in Munich. Late in the evening in Albany announcing the death toll to a suddenly stilled and somber party of local Democrats, Shriver spoke of the "unbridled terror which ravages the world tonight and seemingly all the nights of our lives."

The candidate arrived at his Albany hotel to spend the night and found 150 Jewish students from nearby New York State University camped on his doorstep demanding that he address them.

They wanted commitments from the McGovern-Shriver campaign on an end to Arab terrorism.

Shriver said that "in all honesty" he could not satisfy them. "I wish I could tell you there would no longer be terror in the world if we are elected," Shriver told the students, some of whom had told his aides they would attack him in the press if he declined to see them.

In his travels since his nomination last month, Shriver has told American Jews that Sen. George McGovern's commitment to the security of Israel is unshakable.

He was asked by the students to commit himself and the campaign to economic or military sanctions against Arab states which may harbor terrorists. He gave this reply: "I would not be opposed to it."

Shriver drove downtown to meet with local NAACP members working on a voter registration drive. He told them "George McGovern and I can't do it by ourselves, we need your help," then drove back out to a motel on the outskirts of the city.

McGovern: 'Would Not End Freedom'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sen. George McGovern went before potentially unfriendly crowds today, promising his presidency would not be the end of freedom for Israel nor the elimination of jobs for aerospace workers.

And, in an interview with a Seattle television station taped Tuesday for release today, McGovern said "any laboring man or woman who supports Richard Nixon ought to have his head examined. These people have gone through the mill under the Nixon high-interest, low-employment policies."

The South Dakota Democrat, who said last week in New York that he doesn't believe there is such a thing as the "Jewish vote," softened that stance slightly in an appearance before the Southern California Board of Rabbis. He said today he doesn't believe in a "monolithic Jewish vote."

But the Democratic presidential hopeful went after Jewish votes just the same, asking the rabbis "to judge me on the basis of all my actions over my 15 years of public service, and not on the basis of what the opposition says — or prints — or whispers."

In a speech for the rabbis, McGovern reiterated his oft-stated intention of militarily supporting Israel if elected.

President Nixon, McGovern asserted, is interested in helping Israel only until the Soviet Union is out of the Mideast. McGovern is generally believed to be in trouble this year among Jewish voters who usually support the Democratic candidate.

McGovern said his proposed heavy cut in the defense budget, which is the cause for much of the Jewish opposition to him, would nevertheless "increase the effectiveness of our presence in the Mediterranean."

Later today McGovern was to appear in San Diego and Dallas, Tex.

In another speech prepared for today, this one for the International Association of Machinists, meeting in Los Angeles, McGovern said the Republicans are circulating a "preposterous charge that my policies will cost you jobs, here in aerospace, and here in Southern California. If that were my intention, do you think I would show my face at your convention?"

While cutting defense spending, McGovern told the machinists, he would re-employ workers in jobs building houses "and the public transportation and pollution control systems we need to make America a better place to live."

McGovern also said in the Seattle television interview that if elected president he would name several women to the Cabinet.

Meanwhile, President Nixon ended his California trip with a windswept cruise on a commuter ferryboat and a personal endorsement of a "Gateway West" recreation area — a Pacific counterpart of New York harbor's "Gateway East."

The President and a party of environmental advisers inspected part of the proposed Golden Gate National Recreation Area Tuesday from the ferryboat.

The boat trip was described as a nonpartisan inspection tour of the proposed recreation area, a 24,000 acre string of federal, state and private parcels stretching in two directions from the heart of the 4.5-million person San Francisco urban area.

The project is now pending before Congress.

If adopted as the President endorsed it, Gateway West would bring shoreline parts of three Army bases and two former prison islands — Alcatraz and Angel Island — into a new urban park along with existing state parks and beaches and 8,000 acres of private land in Marin County north of San Francisco.

Nixon described the proposal as a Pacific counterpart to Gateway East, which includes the Statue of Liberty and other New York harbor points in a federal recreation area.

Stage Is Set for Governor Wallace Chairmanship

HILTON HEAD, S.C. (AP) — The stage has been set for Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace to become the next chairman of the Southern Governors Conference.

Gov. John West of South Carolina said Tuesday he will step down and give the post to Wallace. West is vice chairman and would normally move up to the post for 1973.

"Gov. Wallace has suffered emotionally and physically in the last few months. Whether or not we agree with him, this tribute from his fellow Southern governors was the least we could do," said West, like Wallace a Democrat.

Wallace, critically wounded May 15 in an assassination attempt in Maryland, is attending conference sessions in a wheelchair.

His reception has been markedly different from the one accorded him at the last conference when he was on the brink of announcing his presidential candidacy. Then he was cold-shouldered by most governors.

The next vice chairman is expected to be Gov. Melvin Evans of the Virgin Islands, who would become the first black to hold such a high post in the conference.

Also due for consideration today are a score of resolutions. One of them calls upon Congress to enact a uniform school desegregation policy. The resolution, identical to one approved last year, opposes busing for racial balance in schools.

At a black tie dinner for the governors and their staffs Tuesday night, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew plugged for support for revenue sharing legislation pending in Congress.

He was present for an open house before the dinner, but the vice president said he did not discuss politics with the governors.

Representative Record Bid Upset

By United Press International Rep. Walter S. Baring, D-Nev., was upset Tuesday in his bid to win nomination for a record breaking 11th term in Congress from Nevada.

In North Dakota, party backed candidates—Rep. Mark Andrews, shooting for his fifth term, and his Democratic opponent, Richard Ista—easily won nomination.

With 90 per cent of the precincts counted, James B. Baring, a 34-year-old Las Vegas attorney, had 34,318 votes to 29,006 for Baring. Oscar Brooks of Las Vegas was third with 1,380 votes.

North Dakota Republican Lt. Gov. Richard Larsen and Democratic Rep. Arthur A. Link won their parties' nominations to oppose each other for the governor's office—being vacated by 12-year incumbent William Guy.

Larsen won his nomination by a large margin over political maverick Robert McCarney, while Link swamped his opponent, Fargo insurance man Edward P. Burns.

Link moved into the governor's race this year after reapportionment cut the state's representation in the U.S.

Baring is Nevada's only representative.

Fear for Safety of Alleged Chief

NEW YORK (AP) — Auguste Joseph Ricord, the alleged mastermind of a multimillion dollar South American heroin smuggling ring, was expected to be transferred to another jail today after the Nassau County sheriff expressed fears for his safety in the suburban prison.

Ricord, extradited from Paraguay on Saturday, was being held without bail after his Monday arraignment in Manhattan federal court on charges of conspiring to smuggle heroin into the United States in the fusilages of small private planes.

Sheriff Michael Seniuk said Tuesday Ricord was a "high security risk" and "a fair target for rubout." Seniuk, who was out of town when Ricord was incarcerated in the East Meadow jail, also noted that the 72-year-old inmate was a diabetic with a history of heart trouble.

"I don't have the manpower to guard him 24 hours a day," he concluded.

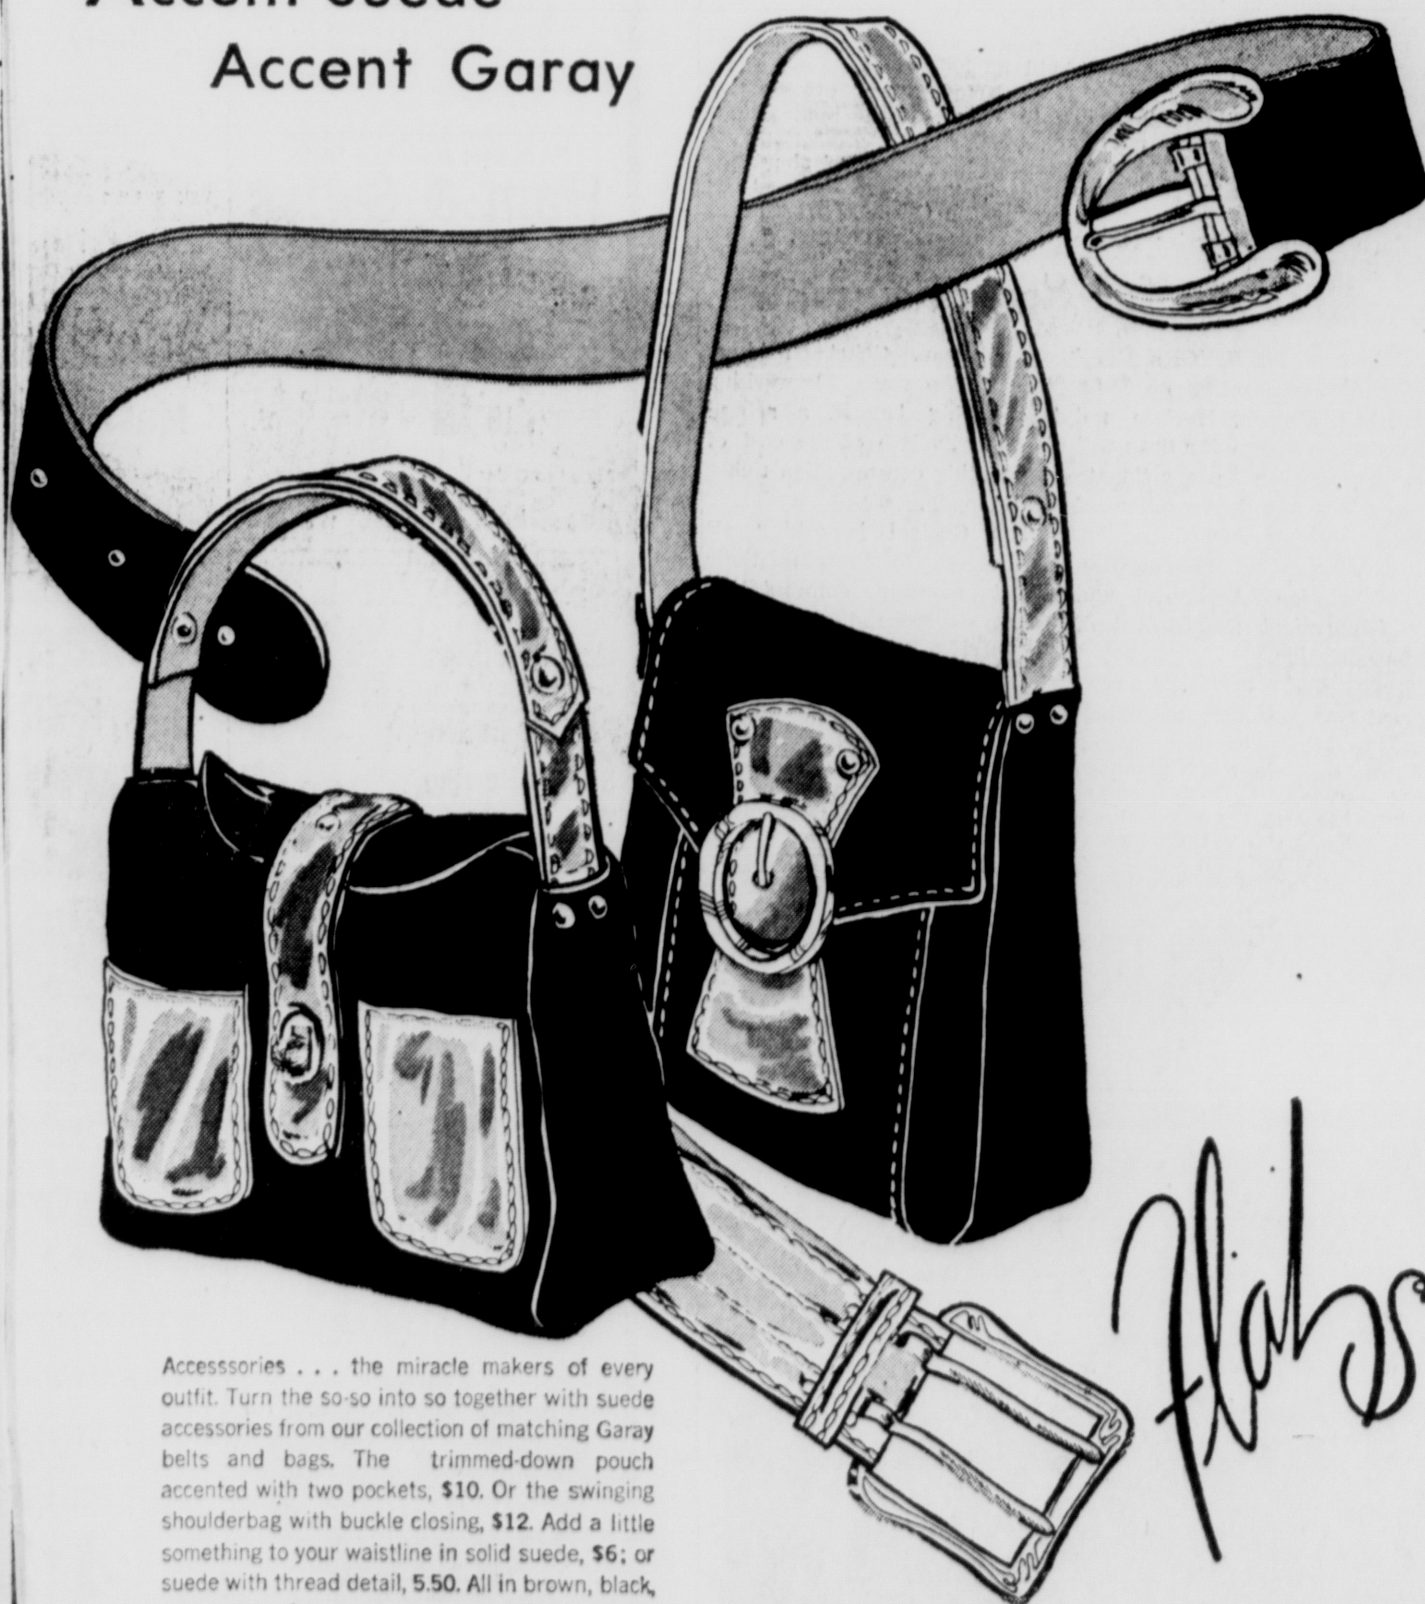

There was no definite word from federal officials here on what they intended to do with Ricord, however. He could be moved to another prison after a bail hearing tentatively set for today.

McCartneys: No double bed of roses.

HOW TO GET TO THE WHITE HOUSE AS A GUEST — MAYBE: Senator George McGovern says if he is elected he will give a People's Dinner Party emulating President Andrew Jackson who, in 1828, threw open the doors on Inauguration Day and let everybody trample over the furniture in muddy boots. McGovern's invitees would be 250 guests selected at random out of his total list of financial contributors. On the other hand, V.P. candidate Sargent Shriver said the first White House dinner of the McGovern administration will be made up of "poor people." Now which is it?

Q: Don't you think Rosalind Russell was the first movie women's libber, with all those career girl pictures she made. How many were there anyway? — M. McC., Toledo, Ohio.

A: Of 50 movies or so, Roz played a lady executive in 23. As Miss Russell says, "I always wore a tan suit, a grey suit, a beige suit and for the last reel, a negligee."

Q: What can you tell us about the current tour Paul McCartney is on with his new group? — T.O., Chicago, Ill.

A: Alas, we wish you hadn't asked. The McCartneys fixed up a bus in psychedelic colors and the group has been traveling through Scandinavia. First there was drug trouble in Sweden, with Paul being fined for possession of marijuana. Then there was the problem of the big double bed that Paul and his wife, Linda, insisted on dragging out of the bus and into various hotels. And last, the group, Wings, is pretty awful — not helped at all by the fact that Mrs. McCartney, who is a key member, sings flat and can barely play the organ. One bit of good news: Linda and Paul seem to still be very much taken with each other and are always seen holding hands.

Q: I heard that the Broadway musical 'Jesus Christ Superstar' was going to be produced all over Europe. How has it been received? — F. L., Vicksburg, Miss.

A: The London Production is the only successful one. The Paris version was a huge flop and lost a fortune, so much so that the other European productions have been canceled.

Q: Do you know anything about a woman who broadcasts a program here called "Dialogue: Assassination"? Is she a nut or what? — P.L., Carmel, Calif.

A: You are talking about Mae Brussell, who was a housewife with five kids back in 1963 when President Kennedy was assassinated. Since then, Mrs. Brussell has made a life's work out of espionage, assassination and conspiracy. She has cross-referenced the entire 26 volumes of the Warren Commission Report and keeps incredible files to the effect that JFK's death was not unplanned.

Her program on KLRB, in Carmel, is an hour a week and she is beginning a new periodical called "Conspiracy Newsletter."

Q: It can't be true that Lee Radziwill and Jackie Onassis are actually going to appear in a movie, can it? — J.O., Boston, Mass.

A: Yes it can be, though it still isn't certain. What is certain is that Jackie's sister, Lee, has spent the summer in Long Island shooting film of her childhood haunts in the Hamptons as well as of their Bouvier relatives, the Beales. Lee persuaded the men who filmed the Rolling Stones in "Gimme Shelter," the Maysles brothers, to do this documentary which will be a retrospective of her and Jackie's growing-up. If Jackie approves, she may appear in the film with Lee. There is even talk that the Kennedy and Radziwill children might be in the movie being made for television.

Refunds for Some Computers

NEW YORK CITY Regular commuters on Penn Central's Hudson, Harlem and New Haven commuter lines will be granted a proportionate refund for the interruption of service which occurred Aug. 28, by decision of the Metropolitan Transportation Authority and the Connecticut Department of Transportation.

Since that evening's rush period was seriously disrupted, due to the massive power failure, the two state agencies have authorized Penn Central to provide either cash refunds or credits to the three lines' commuters.

Nixon Hikes Gallup Lead Over McGovern

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. President Richard Nixon has increased an already-wide lead over his Democratic opponent Sen. George McGovern in the latest Gallup Poll "Trial Heat," conducted over this last weekend.

The results of the latest survey are Nixon 64 per cent, McGovern 30 per cent, undecided 6 per cent. These figures are compared to Nixon 57 per cent, McGovern 31 per cent, undecided 12 per cent in the last survey Aug. 5-12.

The Nixon lead over McGovern is virtually the same as the lead President Lyndon Johnson held over his GOP opponent, Barry Goldwater, at a comparable point in the 1964 campaign, 65 per cent to 29 per cent, with 6 per cent undecided.

The latest survey was conducted Aug. 26 and 27, two days after the close of the Republican National Convention. Results are based on in-person interviews with 1,148 registered voters out of a total sample of 1,467 adults.

Following is the question asked: If the Presidential election were being held today, which candidate would you vote for — McGovern, the Democrat, or Nixon, the Republican?

Man Sentenced In Hit-Run

ROME, N.Y. (UPI)—Thomas Drake, 29, of Rome, father of six children, was sentenced to 30 days in jail and had his driver's license revoked Tuesday night following his arrest in the hit-run death of a teen-ager last month.

Drake, a truck driver, was arrested at his home on information developed by state police, authorities said. Charged with leaving the scene of an accident, Drake pleaded guilty before City Court Judge Joseph Serino.

Police said Drake was the driver of the car that struck down bicycle-rider Sidney Copperwheat III, 15, of Oriskany on Aug. 21.

The 30-day jail term and revocation of license was the maximum sentence for the charge under state law, authorities said.

Drake lives at 134 River St. The boy lived on Miller Street.

Jack Anderson Says

Enemy Morale Still High

WASHINGTON — The breakdown in enemy morale, which led to the Korean truce, isn't happening in Vietnam. On the contrary, the North Vietnamese troops are so strongly motivated that there's little chance of a military collapse. This is the conclusion of four confidential studies made for the Defense Department by the RAND Corporation in 1965, 1966, 1967 and 1970. The latest battlefield reports indicate that Communist morale is still high as ever. In the words of the 1970 study, the "principal conclusion" must be that the Communist side, "as a group, as man for man, seems unlikely to yield, let alone disintegrate, under the type of pressure the United States can apply in the pursuit of current objectives."

"The thought of compromise in the current struggle, even in return for concessions, seems alien to these men," continues the study. "They see the war entirely as one of defense of their country against the invading Americans who, in turn, are seen merely as the successors to the French..." Back in 1951, RAND did a similar study of Communist morale in the Korean War. The results were so startling that the RAND researcher, Herbert Goldhamer, rushed a secret memo to the commanding general. "The CCF (Chinese Communist Force) has increasingly lost its capacity to control its troops," Goldhamer reported urgently. "It is a matter of greater importance to realize that... the loss of its military-political grip over its troops... reached a point in June that for the Communist command cannot be estimated to be less than critical." Collapse of Morale Goldhamer's assessment turned out to be right and the Communists quickly thereafter agreed to a truce. But none of the signs, which led him to detect a collapse of enemy morale in North Korea, are now evident in North Vietnam. RAND is a brain factory which does strategic studies for the Pentagon. The 1970 study, written by Konrad Kellen, is based on 22 in-depth interviews with North Vietnamese prisoners and corroborated by many interviews over the years. "If what these 22 men have said," advised Kellen, "... corresponds to what large numbers of soldiers, or perhaps even the majority of Vietnam's 30 million people similarly feel, then the chances of rooting out (the Communist) revolution by military force or political devices is dim indeed, and emerges as an undertaking questionable in more ways than one."

"The findings would, if accurate, indicate also how narrow the area of compromise in negotiations can be, at best. In an indirect way, however, the findings also indicate a way for an ending different from the one we have been pursuing. "The intense anger against us, the full responsibility the respondents attribute to us for the war in its present form, are in visible contrast to the virtual absence of violent words by the respondents against their enemy compatriots. Does this indicate a high reconciliation potential?"

Kellen was struck by the unshakable morale of the Communist troops. "To anyone experienced in interviewing soldiers in war," he wrote, "the results are... extraordinary. Enemy morale appears high indeed, particularly in view of the enormous disproportion in power and resources of the two contenders..." Deep Roots He found "particularly remarkable the degree to which the men do not simply 'mouth' what they have been told, but seem to have fully absorbed and assimilated it, rendering it in their own terms, illustrating it with their own examples and experiences."

"Thus, what may have begun as indoctrination has become sincere conviction, opinion and emotion, and may, therefore, be regarded as virtually impossible to dislodge. "The men polled here — all except one — are unlikely to change their views or to lose their readiness to make the necessary sacrifices commensurate with those views. They can perhaps be killed, but they probably cannot be dissuaded either by words or by hardships."

The study adds this ominous note. "The enemy soldier who, lacking all the important modern engines of war, cannot be broken in his morale and motivation, seems anomalous, because probably few enemy armies could have carried on the war under comparable circumstances. "At the very least, others would resent fighting an enemy who had B-52s, sensors and napalm, which they lacked. But it is precisely that resentment — a powerful corrosive agent to morale — that seems entirely absent in the enemy forces..."

"One of the most effective leaflets in World War II was one entitled 'Human Hands vs. Steel.' It told the Nazi soldiers that men could not be expected to fight with their bare hands against steel; that their air force, equipment and supplies were inferior to ours; and that it was, therefore, not dishonorable but only logical for them to give up the fight and surrender. "To Hitler's supermen, this was an eminently sensible way of thinking and they responded in large numbers. But the enemy in Vietnam thinks differently..."

Footnote: We reached Kellen, who acknowledged his authorship of the RAND report. Nothing he has learned since 1970 has changed his views, he said, but he cautioned that he is no longer privy to prisoner information. From our own sources, however, we learned that enemy morale is still rated as high.

Freeman Editorials

Vietnam Withdrawal

The 12,000 more American fighting men who will be withdrawn in the next three months will reduce the force left behind to 27,000 men, fewer than we have maintained in Korea since the end of that war 20 years ago. The difference is that we still have nearly 100,000 in air and sea support, while the ground fighting is done by South Vietnamese.

President Nixon's program now is to negotiate a settlement, in public in Paris or privately through his foreign advisor, while enabling the Vietnamization of the South to withstand the North's invasion. So far, the North has not yielded, and there is no sign that it will, despite the urging of its main allies, China and the Soviet Union, to get the best terms it can from a Nixon administration before the election strengthens its commitment further.

Obviously, North Vietnam is waiting out the American election in a thin hope that a change of administration will play into its hands. With this last withdrawal, Mr. Nixon feels the fighting is ended and the sea and air support can maintain the South's defense until its air force can furnish adequate support for its ground troops.

At worst, the war will become more and more a Vietnam affair and our effort will continue so long as it will be necessary to see our prisoners of war returned. At best, Hanoi may learn that Vietnamization defeats its aim of taking over the South, and will end the war and hope for reunification at some future date.

Auto Price Freeze

Automobile prices for the four American producers will be maintained at 1972 levels for at least a few weeks after 1973 models go on sale in mid-September. The proposed price scales of General Motors and Ford were denied by the Price Commission; action on Chrysler's and American Motors' scales was postponed, producing the same effect.

The manufacturers' proposed scales were to cover the added cost of pollution control equipment and of safety bumpers ordered by the Government. Under White House pressure, first the manufacturers rolled back their intended increases to those costs only. Then they rejected completely, with public hearings set for September 12, with written statements up to September 30. No final decision could be made until October or later.

While the orders were issued by the Price Commission, their genesis came from higher up. President Nixon admitted this when he told interviewers "this is not a pro-business or pro-labor administration," citing as an example that they provided the biggest individual tax reduction in history in 1969, increased the burden for corporations by $4-billion and "we moved against two auto companies, for example, to have them roll back increases; that we moved against the other companies that have been polluting." He added, "when labor is wrong we say so, when business is wrong we say so."

In the case of the automobiles, the dividend to purchasers of 1973 model cars will run into millions, as buyers will rush for the new cars while their prices are frozen. It is good politics but also should be good policy down the road, when the heaviest bargaining calendar in postwar history comes up next year and price stabilization will get its biggest test.

NO PLACE ELSE TO GO—Representative John Ashbrook, the Conservative who opposed President Nixon in the early primaries, is a weekly newspaper publisher in Johnstown, Ohio. "Obviously I'm not going to vote for McGovern," he said, "so I suppose when I go into the polling booth I'll vote for Nixon." He might have added, as so many of his kind have, there's no place else to go.

POLLUTION CLOSES BEACH—One of the most desirable beaches in southern France, at Hyeres, has been courageously closed to bathers because of a dangerously high bacteria count in the water. Hyeres is working to eliminate the high count. Perhaps if some beaches near our larger cities were to be notified they must close if the pollution is not greatly reduced by next summer, we would see action here, too.

Martin Nolan Says

Colson's Rising Star

WASHINGTON — Chuck Colson has been trying to give up cigarettes for the past three weeks and his staff may suffer for it. The No. 1 hard-nose of the Nixon Administration, the major mystery man of the White House, now smokes a pipe, but his disposition seems less sweet than his tobacco. White House yeomen entering his presence find that the clouds of smoke do not obscure the major props behind his desk. One is a bedsheet-sized poster with a movable dial saying: "61 days before election day." The poster has been there as long as its companion wall poster, taken from the May 14 quote in the Washington Post: "I hope the Nixon people do to George McGovern what the Democrats did... underestimate him. If they do that, WE'LL KILL THEM. Gary Hart, McGovern Campaign Director."

The Washington Post unearthed a memo from Colson to his constantly growing staff Aug. 28, reminding them that "a campaign is a 24-hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week job. Do not be lulled into a false sense of security by the polls which show the President well ahead at the moment. They will change. Make every day count."

By all estimates the most shadowy, least-publicized figure in the Nixon hard-command, Charles Wendell Colson is currently embroiled in the Watergate bugging caper. He has given his deposition in a civil suit against him from Lawrence O'Brien, but that can't be made public because of court order. Colson has appeared only twice in television interviews, largely because of the Watergate aftermath. He shuns publicity, because, as he told one associate, "once any guy around the White House becomes concerned with his own image and his own press, he's no longer concerned primarily with the President's. Such ego trips!" Richard Nixon's ego trip is Charles Colson's ego trip. Although he is an Easterner, born in Massachusetts, and an Ivy Leaguer, a Brown alumnus, evidence accumulates that he is as much as alter ego to the President as H. R. Haldeman, the White House chief of staff. Ever since he arrived at the White House in late 1969, Colson has been sending memos to the President on building "a new majority" for 1972 that would include Catholics, ethnics and labor blocs. He arranged for New York City hard-hats to meet with the President in late '69 and for leading Catholic educators to meet with a concerned, sympathetic President in 1970.

In staff meetings he flatly predicts that "we'll carry the Catholic vote, the ethnic vote, the working class vote. This election will be more like 1934 than 1964, with a majority, not a coalition. "I call it the Nixon party, not the Republican party, because it's his majority," Colson has told his underlings. "It's a majority that will last because it's based on a common theme, a belief in traditional values, the work ethic, old-fashioned patriotism, a belief in the system. It's against the new life style of permissiveness. "Even Roosevelt had only a coalition built on the disadvantaged minorities. But those people now have it made. Some of them have 17-foot cabin cruisers. They're the haves, not the have-nots and they want to preserve the system."

Chuck Colson wants to preserve the system that enabled him to work his way through law school, become a high-powered Washington lobbyist and an absolutely loyal aide to the President. "I would do anything Richard Nixon asked me to do — anything," he once said.

The President's hideaway "working office" in the New Executive Office Building is next to Colson's suite. Colson is tough, smart and loyal and that's enough for Richard Nixon. In the midst of the Watergate typhoon, his star is steadily rising.

There is a "bloc," it must be the young first voters. If, as most sagacious observers believe, the young get out of bed on election day and vote, most of it will gravitate toward McGovern no matter how hard Nixon tries to seduce them with exuberant bear hugs. The young and penniless are almost in favor of reform, which is a Democratic Party copyright. The same voters, 30 years from now, with a home, a car and money in the bank, will renege, react and vote the straight Republican ticket. They will not listen to the blandishments of the Judas goat, John Connally. Nor are they allied with George Wallace. And yet he, and he alone, can cancel their votes for McGovern with ten million conservative votes for Nixon. I listen. I think. I watch. It's going to be a dirty campaign and the wounds will fester for a long time.

BERRY'S WORLD

"Comrade, what does 'jump to another league' mean?"

Jim Bishop: Reporter

The Festering of Political Wounds

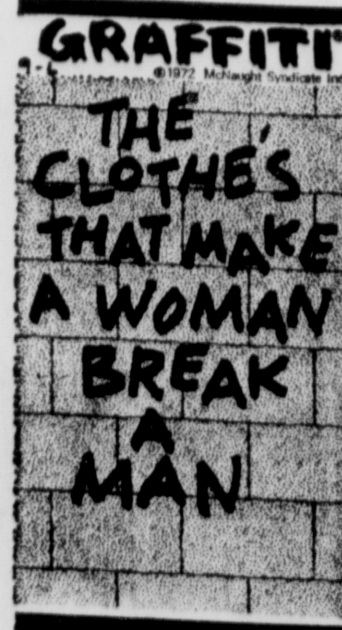

It is going to be a dirty campaign. The academic issues will be lost in rancorous personal clashes. A pity. And yet, even before the political drums are heard throughout the land, the people have become angry. At social gatherings I find it impossible to discuss Republican and Democratic virtues and vices because my acquaintances see one party as altogether good and the other as irreparably bad. All national campaigns are vicious to a limited degree because so much is at stake. The last truly dirty campaign occurred in October 1944, when Franklin D. Roosevelt ran for a fourth term, and Thomas E. Dewey ran for his first. FDR, old and sick, wrapped himself in his navy cape and ran as commander-in-chief of the armed forces in the final year of a great war. Dewey, an efficient and competent prosecutor and governor, could hardly attack a President who had brought the nation through a great economic crisis and was a year away from the final triumph in war. So, with the approval of National Republican Chairman Herbert Brownell, he attacked the President personally. The White House, he said, was full of "tired, old, quarrelsome, sick men." Truth is no defense of poor tactics. Dewey's assault had the net effect of arousing FDR from apathy to fighting pitch. The President, accepting the Democratic renomination from a train parked in the yards at Chicago, said he had no time to "campaign in the usual manner." When he returned from a trip to Hawaii and the Aleutians, he found the time. He called in Ed Flynn, boss of the Bronx, Harry Hopkins, Judge Sam Roseman, his speech writer, and said: "Assuming that 40 per cent of the voters are democrats, and 40 per cent are Republicans, I want to be pointed at the 20 per cent Independents. Don't book me for Democratic organizations as such: I want at least 11 per cent of those Independents. It was good strategy. It worked. FDR won 25,602,505 votes and 432 electoral votes. Dewey got 22,970,065 and 99 electoral votes. At 3:30 a.m., on the morning of Nov. 8th, 1944, Roosevelt tired of waiting for a congratulatory telegram from Governor Dewey. He turned his wheelchair toward the back of his mother's mansion at Hyde Park, wheeled it up the ramp toward the dumbwaiter he used to haul himself upstairs, and said something rare for FDR: "I still hate that son of a bitch!"

Venom engenders venom. When the rank and file voters are unwilling to concede that there is any good in "the other party," America is headed for hard words and hard times. Matters are already so bad that political columnists have been brazenly slanting their sentences to induce contempt for Senator McGovern or President Nixon. In my opinion, the election is going to be much tighter than the polls would indicate. All of the preliminary findings are worthless in any case. It's that final one which rates study. Nixon in 1968 was running away from Humphrey until the final two weeks. Overnight, it became a horse race with the contenders neck and neck. It must be that a proportion of our voters wait to spot the "underdog," and then vote for him. I have never believed that unions or blacks can pledge a united bloc of votes. Money, yes. Votes, no. If there is a "bloc," it must be the young first voters. If, as most sagacious observers believe, the young get out of bed on election day and vote, most of it will gravitate toward McGovern no matter how hard Nixon tries to seduce them with exuberant bear hugs. The young and penniless are almost in favor of reform, which is a Democratic Party copyright. The same voters, 30 years from now, with a home, a car and money in the bank, will renege, react and vote the straight Republican ticket. They will not listen to the blandishments of the Judas goat, John Connally. Nor are they allied with George Wallace. And yet he, and he alone, can cancel their votes for McGovern with ten million conservative votes for Nixon. I listen. I think. I watch. It's going to be a dirty campaign and the wounds will fester for a long time.

PETITIONS PRESENTED — Several Town of Esopus residents present a petition to Town Supervisor George Freer urging the New York State Department of Transportation to "proceed with plans for the construction of a new Rondout (Creek) Bridge." Since the state announced recently that it would repair the existing span rather than erect a new structure, town residents have launched a concerted drive, to date unsuccessful, to persuade the state to change its plans. County Legislator Scores Proposal

WAWARSING — Opposition to a recent application of Colonial Campsite Inc. to open and operate a 200-unit trailer court in Greenfield Park and discharge effluent of treated sewage into the Beerkill Creek there has been expressed by County Legislator Alex J. Nirenberg (D-Dist. 10).

In a resolution to be presented at the Sept. 14 meeting of the Ulster County Legislature, the Nirenberg will seek the support of his fellow legislators in protesting the use of the Beerkill for trailer sewage, to the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation.

Nirenberg said he has personally filed a formal request with the Conservation Department seeking to be considered an interested party both as a member of the County Legislature and as a resident of the area.

The application to open and operate the trailer court has been made by Alvin Kaden, president of Colonial Camp Site Inc., of Greenfield Park, according to Nirenberg.

In making his protest, the Ellenville lawyer said that, "the discharge of sewage would change the composition of the water in the Beerkill Creek and would be detrimental to the fish life of the creek."

"There are too few streams that are a great inducement to residents, vacationers and sportsmen to come to and enjoy the area."

"For the Department of Environmental Control to permit such a project would encourage other developers to use the same method of adulteration of our natural resources and could make it a prime target for additional trailer parks of this type," Nirenberg suggested.

Nirenberg said he is "opposed to any development which would use natural waters of any waterway and/or replace it with the effluent or treated sewage and/or drainage water which is detrimental to the ecology and balance of nature."

COG... Stay of Eviction Issued

And MATT SPIRENG

ULSTER HEIGHTS — The Children of God, who were to be evicted today from their settlement in Ulster Heights, have been granted a stay of execution of the eviction order until Sept. 12. The COG had been trying to get a 14-day stay of the order, and only by seemingly divine intervention did they get the six-day stay.

The stay of execution was granted Tuesday by Wawarsing Town Justice Maurice Rosenstock, who had signed the original eviction order Aug. 23 in Wawarsing Town Court.

It was to be served today by Ulster County Sheriff William Martin. A COG elder who identified himself as Jared said Martin had called the COG Tuesday to tell them that if he did not receive a stay on the eviction order by noon today he was going to arrive at the settlement to serve the order by 1 p.m.

Justice Rosenstock gave two major reasons for the stay of the eviction order. He told The Freeman that a child was born at the settlement Tuesday and that the COG had no place for the infant. He also said the stay was granted because the COG believed wrongly that the administration of their group was negotiating to purchase the property owned by the Renaissance Project, from which the COG is to be evicted.

Before the stay was granted, Jared said officials of the Renaissance Project, the New Rochelle based anti-drug group which owns the old hotel which housed the COG and is evicting them, and Renaissance attorney Stephen Shoeman had told the COG the eviction order would be withdrawn.

Jared said the COG had been "doublecrossed." However, Schoeman has consistently told The Freeman that Renaissance wanted the COG out of the old hotel "as soon as possible."

Rosenstock said a Washington based lawyer for the COG has assured him that the COG will be out of the building next week and that there will be no further requests for stay of execution of the eviction order. Ben Noble, attorney for the COG, said previously that an appeal had been noted, but that if the COG were put out of the Ulster Heights settlement, they would seek recourse through the courts.

Jay Wormus, a COG elder, said they had people out looking but had not yet located a place for the colony to stay if they were put out.

"We'll just trust in the Lord," he said. "God's going to provide for us. That's what living by faith is all about."

"God's never let us down yet," said Wormus. "He'll either have to touch the hearts of the people so we can stay, or maybe find a place for us out of the blue."

When asked if perhaps some more definite plans ought to be made, Wormus said, "That's what makes it so exciting; you never know what He's going to do."

Rosenstock has said that the COG had been in "habitual defiance" of the local housing laws, and cited several dangerous conditions noted by Town of Wawarsing building inspector Donald Mekulik.

Rosenstock said at the time he signed the eviction order Aug. 23 and again Tuesday, that the COG were being evicted as a result of violation of the orders he issued last March. Eviction proceedings were brought by Renaissance, both last spring and this summer against the COG, both times for violations of the housing codes found by Mekulik.

Last March, Rosenstock allowed the COG to stay in Ulster Heights if they corrected the violations, and he ordered Mekulik to make periodic inspections.

He told the COG they were going out if Mekulik ever found violations. He found more violations in late July.

Experiment... 'Successful'

By LYNN MULVANEY

KINGSTON — An experiment in holding criminal jury trials in Ulster County Court during the month of August has been declared a success by County Court Judge Raymond J. Mino who instituted the innovation in an attempt to dispose of more criminal cases and comply with the new speedy trial rule.

In the past, motion and special terms of County Court were held during the hot weather month of August but jury trials were unheard of within recent memory due to excessive heat in the court rooms, vacationing lawyers and jurors.

Judge Mino decided to try an August jury term and last June asked for volunteers to serve. During the past session of the New York State Legislature the speedy trial rule was passed and called for cases to be disposed of within certain periods of time. Judge Mino's experiment was prompted by this rule inasmuch as Ulster's criminal docket is crowded as is other localities.

About 30 to 40 jurors became involved in the experiment with the first group of volunteers later enlarged to include others.

Judge Mino chose the larger of three courtrooms in the County Court House to hear cases because the two on the lower floor retain excessive amounts of heat in the summer and there is no air conditioning in the building. Fortunately August's heat was not as great as in past years and the plan worked out. Otherwise, Judge Mino said, we would have had to recess because "when it gets too hot, it is difficult to concentrate."

Altogether nine criminal cases were disposed of with three of them concluded after selection of a jury.

There were other advantages to holding jury trials in August. It permitted the County Court to conduct its business without competing with the Supreme Court for lawyer's services or court room space.

The trial term, which began Aug. 7, ran a full two weeks and was interspersed with numerous hearings on identification, mental health and admissibility of evidence.

Next year, Judge Mino plans a full term in August hoping that problems such as the heat and availability of lawyers can be overcome.

Mayors Stage Meeting; Talk Revenue Sharing

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The mayors of nine of the nation's largest cities meet here today to complete a report calling for action by the current session of Congress on revenue sharing and community development bills and a release by the Nixon administration of authorized funds for city housing projects.

Mayor John Lindsay of New York, home of 2.5 million Jews, canceled plans to attend the session after learning of death of Israeli hostages at the Olympic Games.

The agenda for members of the legislative action committee of the U.S. Conference of Mayors also lists a news conference at the Everson Museum of Art and a bus tour of the city's urban renewal projects.

The most crucial issue discussed by the officials was expected to be that of frozen funds for urban areas.

Three of the mayors Tuesday charged that the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) was withholding more than $11 billion in federal aid earmarked for the nation's urban areas.

Mayors Moon Landrieu, of New Orleans, the committee chairman, Sam Massell of Atlanta and Norman Y. Mineta of San Jose, Calif., all decried the situation, but said they were powerless to change it.

But Mineta said the legislative action committee would continue to "apply the heat as a national lobbying effort" to untangle the funds.

He added that the impoundment of funds already appropriated by Congress, but frozen by OMB prior to dissemination to cities, "thwarted the Congressional intent." It showed, he said, that the Nixon administration was "concerned not with the cities or with the people of the cities."

"It's reflective of a philosophy concerned with holding debt limits at a certain point," he said.

The frozen funds have been a source of heated debate since February when the OMB said it was holding back $12.3 billion, awaiting confirmation that the proposed recipients were eligible or approved.

In addition to the mayors of New Orleans, Atlanta and San Jose, mayors John V. Lindsay of New York City, Kevin H. White of Boston, Kenneth A. Gibson of Newark, N.J., and John D. Driggs of Phoenix, Ariz., were in Syracuse Tuesday as guests of Mayor Lee Alexander. Mayor Henry Meier of Milwaukee was represented by an aide, Richard Glaman.

Alexander hosted a dinner at his home Tuesday night during which all members of the committee were presented with paintings done by inmates of the nearby Auburn Correctional Facility.

City School Strike ...Possibility Looms

NEW YORK (AP) — As the possibility of a strike by the city's 60,000 public school teachers loomed closer, negotiators for the AFL-CIO United Federation of Teachers were studying a new to-tal contract package put forward by the Board of Education.

The union officials were working to decide whether to submit the just-completed contract offer for consideration by the UFT's 1,500-member delegate assembly, scheduled to convene Thursday.

If approved by the delegate assembly, the proposed contract would then require rank-and-file ratification.

In case no new work agreement is reached, to replace the current three-year contract that expires Friday, the union has vowed a strike on Monday, when the city's 900 schools, enrolling some 1.1 million pupils, are slated to reopen.

The UFT, maintaining a "no contract, no work" policy, staged teacher walkouts in 1967 and 1968 despite state legislation banning strikes by public employees.

Before the school board made the contract proposal, Albert Shanker, head of the UFT, said Tuesday a strike was "one shade this side of inevitable."

He said the "hang-up" to an agreement was not what the union was requesting but instead "all the things the Board of Education wants to take away from the teachers."

Questioned about the possibility of a strike, Joseph Montserratt, president of the Board of Education, said Tuesday, "the decision to strike is Mr. Shanker's, not the board's."

Mayor John V. Lindsay, at a City Hall news conference Tuesday, said he was hopeful that a walkout could be averted.

Vandalism Investigation Continues

PORT EWEN — Deputy sheriffs continued today investigation of vandalism that extensively damaged the auditorium and windows in the main building of the Port Ewen School.

First Sergeant Donald Policastro said investigation by Deputies Angel Baez and Joseph Simmons disclosed that glass was broken in a door leading to the school auditorium and 11 large panes of glass were smashed. Bags of powdered plaster were broken open and the contents spread around the interior of the building.

Policastro also said five speakers were stolen. Four large windows also were smashed in the main school building and obscene writing using the plaster was on the walls.

Meanwhile, the sheriff's department continued investigation of recent vandalism at the Grace Community Church in Lake Katrine where vandals broke three windows, where several mail boxes were knocked down and in one case continued investigation of recent mail was strewn across a yard.

Resignations At Meeting

TOWN OF OLIVE town negotiating team with Local 750 of the Highway Department. Lynch said he felt there was a conflict with his being town attorney (and rendering legal decisions on proceedings of the committee) and a member of the committee. Town Justice Mrs. Nancy Risely will fill the vacancy.

Mrs. Mae Steen resigned as town publicity officer, citing personal reasons. The resignation is effective Sept. 30. The town board will name a replacement at its October meeting. Mrs. Steen will remain as clerk to the town supervisor.

Mrs. Antoinette Tenant was appointed a member of the Bridge and Highway Committee of the Town Board, believed to be the first woman to serve on that committee.

The zoning commission issued a report to the town board which will hold a public hearing of its own within a month. According to Mrs. Steen, the publicity officer, questions were raised on a requirement for 125-foot frontage on properties; people wanted more restrictions placed on trailers and also wanted restrictions on the board of appeals which will be established if zoning is approved.

The Ambulance Committee gave a report, noting that it needs volunteers "very badly."

A meeting of the committee will be held at the Olive Library at 8 p.m. on Sept. 11 with the public invited.

Town Historian Vera Sickler gave a report on the town's upcoming sesquicentennial celebration, set for June 30, July 1-2 of next year.

Growth Has Its Bad Side

SAO PAULO, BRAZIL (AP)—Things come big in Sao Paulo. The largest industrial complex in Latin America surrounds it. The biggest port on the continent, Santos, lies at its door. The largest land area covered by any city on this side of the world, including Los Angeles, rests beneath it.

Problems come big too. Half of the homes in Latin America's largest city are not served by running water. They have to rely on well-water which can be a breeding ground for pollution and diseases such as cholera and dysentery. Almost a third of the city lacks a tie-in to the sewage system. Three hundred thousand persons pour into Brazil's leading metropolis every year in search of jobs and opportunities.

The jobs and opportunities are there—for qualified and well-trained individuals. Thus many of the immigrants wind up in decrepit shanty towns on the city's outskirts.

They make this monstrous city of 6 million inhabitants one of the fastest—if not the fastest-growing cities in the world.

"It doesn't make any sense to be pouring money into the city to solve problems brought on by increasing population, since we can't keep up with it," the man holding the reins says. "So we have to stop the population growth."

Mayor Jose Carlos Figueredo Ferraz sees Sao Paulo as a problem of "undisciplined growth." He has pushed for creation of an "infrastructure" to tame it.

"The plan calls for this, but the rest of it is mostly restrictive. If it weren't our efforts would be in vain."

The "Plan for Integral Development" has been approved by the Municipal Council.

Some urban plans before this administration were made to accommodate a population of as much as 30 million. We don't want that. Plans now foresee a complete turnabout in municipal policy."

The main points of the plan call for a new series of expressways to speed "Paulistas" to and from work, strict anti-pollution measures and better use of available land through a new building code.

The code limits new construction to certain areas away from the jammed and traffic congested downtown districts. By and a high, accident fatality rate. On a recent Friday an estimated one million man-hours hopes new population "nuclei" will be formed.

Eventually the basic reasons for a booming population—jobs, traffic, diversions and homes—will be moved further and further away from the city, thus discouraging new arrivals.

New highways which will crisscross the city will both reduce chronic traffic congestion and a high, accident fatality rate. On a recent Friday an estimated one million man-hours of work went down the drain as hundreds of commuters remained snarled in downtown traffic.

Sao Paulo is spared some of the money problems afflicting some cities.

Her $350 million budget in 1971 was six times bigger than her 1965 expenditures. The mayor says much of this is due to new state aid, which accounts for 40 per cent of Sao Paulo's income.

THOMAS R. ROWE

Tillson Man Given Medal for Rescue

WARRENTON, ORE. — AD2 Thomas R. Rowe, 27, son of Mrs. Frank Rowe Sr., Box 988, Tillson, recently was awarded the Coast Guard Commendation Medal for his heroic effort in rescuing a 15-year-old boy on the Northern Oregon coast.

Aviation Machinist's Mate Second Class Rowe, who is married to Katherine A. Conolly Rowe of Box 323, Tillson, was cited for his skill in maneuvering the hoisting basket of the Coast Guard helicopter to the youngster on a rocky cliffside. Approximately 100 feet of cable had to be reeled out to reach the boy.

The Coast Guard citation pointed out there was no place to set the hoisting basket to allow the boy easy access. Rowe's verbal inputs to the pilot helped the latter to maintain a stable hover some 100 feet from the youngster.

Due to the turbulent winds, Rowe had to constantly raise and lower the basket before the rescue was completed.

A Coast Guard Commendation medal also was awarded to the pilot of the copter.

Rowe, a former employee of International Business Machines Corp., Kingston, entered service Jan. 22, 1964. He reported to the Coast Guard Air Station at Warrenton, Ore., May 14, 1971.

Listen Veteran...

KINGSTON — Being Forgetful Can be costly, especially when it comes to forgetting to pay life insurance premiums. Some veterans find this out too late. So here's a tip for you if you hold National Service Life or United States Government Life Insurance: If you're receiving a monthly compensation or pension check you can have your premium deducted from the check, that is if the amount is large enough to cover the premium. If the amount is too small, or you don't receive a monthly VA check, consider making your premium payments on a quarterly, semi-annual or annual basis. Besides giving you ample time to make the payments, you save on lower premiums, in addition to lower postage and checking account charges. Interested in changing to a more convenient method of premium payment?

Rhinebeck Army Captain Selected for Program

KANSAS CITY, MO. — Army Captain Kenneth C. Briggs Jr. of Rhinebeck has been selected for the two-year degree completion program at Georgia Southern College in Statesboro. Announcement was made following his completion of the Signal Officer's Advanced Course at Fort Monmouth, N.J.

Captain Briggs will begin his studies in September toward a major in industrial management.

The Rhinebeck serviceman, who has completed two courses with the New York Institute of Technology, took advantage of Monmouth College's West Long Branch during his stay at Fort Monmouth.

The captain was last stationed in Vietnam and is a holder of the Bronze Star Medal, three awards of the Army Commendation Medal and 11 awards of the air medal.

Captain Briggs' mother, Mrs. Frieda S. Briggs, lives on Primrose Hill Road in Rhinebeck and his wife, Bonnie, resided in Eatontown, N.J., during his studies.

GRADUATED — Robert Johansen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Johansen of Burgher Road, West Shokan, recently was graduated from Aviation Hydraulic Mechanic School in Memphis, Tenn. The West Shokan Marine is now stationed at Cherry Point, N. C., base of the Second Marine Aircraft Wing.

Saugerties Dispute... State Hearing Postponed

By JON POWERS

BALLSTON SPA
Supreme Court Justice Michael J. Sweeney Tuesday signed a show cause order that temporarily postponed today's State Education Department hearing on the dispute between the Saugerties Board of Education and Superintendent of Schools Dr. Dexter O. Arnold.

The show cause order was requested by the Board of Education. The school board is fighting to prevent the State Education Department hearing.

The Board of Education has petitioned to have the Appellate Division, rather than the State Education Department, conduct the hearing on the Dr. Arnold affair. The school board maintains that the State Education Department does not have the jurisdiction to intervene in a contract dispute between a school district and one of its employees. The show cause order, served on the State Education Department, is returnable Monday before the Appellate Division of State Supreme Court, Justice Sweeney told Freeman late Tuesday. "I granted a stay of the hearing until Monday when the full court will determine the motion," Board of Education secretary Peter Kramer told The Freeman today that the school board has requested "a preference date on Monday to determine jurisdictional right." In effect, the board has asked the Appellate Division to rule Monday on whether the State Education Department has the jurisdiction to intervene in the matter. Earlier, Supreme Court Justice Harold Hughes ruled that the State Education Department has the right to conduct a hearing for any aggrieved school district employee. It was Hughes' ruling that the Board of Education was appealing through Tuesday's request for a show cause order. Kramer added that if the "preference date" of Monday is granted, a ruling in the matter should be made "within several days." The Commissioner of Education was originally scheduled to conduct a hearing on Dr. Arnold's appeal of firing by the school board at 1 p.m.

today in Albany. Dr. Arnold was fired at a special meeting of the school board on June 30. He later appealed his dismissal to the State Education Department, and requested a hearing. Since that hearing was granted, the school board has gone to court several times in an attempt to prevent it.

Dr. Arnold, meanwhile, continues as Superintendent of Schools under a court order. When Dr. Arnold was fired by the school board in June, no specific reasons were given for the dismissal. The Board of Education has stated it will present full documentation of its charges at a legal hearing on the matter.

By HUGH REYNOLDS

ALBANY
Supreme Court Justice Harold J. Hughes has ruled in favor of a Woodstock attorney opposed to the proposed Lewis Hollow Subdivision and has continued a restraining order against construction tion in what would have been a posed subdivision comprised 32 building lots on a tract of 64 acres off Lewis Hollow Road. Several residents, including Alen, appeared at the public hearing and opposed the application

James V. Gordon following a public hearing by the Town Planning Board on April 20. The proposed surface drainage, water supply and sewage disposal." On May 4, the planning board reserved approval of the application, pending receipt of a $13,000 for construction of a road in the development. According to Justice Hughes, on May 22, at a public hearing, the board's chairman announced that a letter had been received from the town's attorney advising that the $13,000 security had been deposited or disapproved the application but instead had allowed the necessary 45 days to elapse after which, on June 9, the subdivision plan was filed with the county clerk. Thirteen homes have been built on the site.

The first hearing before Justice Hughes on the case was held on June 16 but was postponed at the request of H. Clark Bell, representing the town. On Aug. 4 Justice Hughes intimated to approval by the board. Allen filed his suit the same day. The town planning board contended that it had not approved

Shawangunk Planners Give Approval

WALLKILL
The Shawangunk Planning Board approved one subdivision application at its Tuesday night meeting and deferred action on a second application.

The Kobb subdivision for two residential lots on Oregon Trail was approved for one-family residences after a public hearing. The application of Joseph Schrempp for a 16-lot subdivision on Hansburg Road was deferred following another public hearing. The applicant was directed to submit to the planning board in writing his request for variances in the zoning ordinance that would include elimination of sidewalks, curbing, and lighting in the subdivision. Schrempp planning board in writing his request for their elimination because of the predominantly rural nature of the location.

On Aug. 4 Justice Hughes intimated to approval by the board. Allen filed his suit the same day. The town planning board contended that it had not approved

On Aug. 29, Justice Hughes rendered his decision in favor of Allen, ordering the planning board to initiate new proceedings on the application. The Lewis Hollow Subdivision plans call for the construction of some 32 homes in the $45,000 to $55,000 range.

The land was purchased by Abram F. Molyneux of Ohio Mountain Road and Evelyn F. Striebel of Glasco Turnpike in February of 1967 for $10,000 from Helen Metzger of Shaker Heights, Ohio. Jeannette Miller of Snyder, N. Y., and Alice Murray Mauer of Waynesboro, Va. It was sold to Whitney and Gordon on Dec. 30, 1967 for $86,000.

Frank R. Jones, Trailways president, said that the increases in service were made possible by the purchase of 11 new coaches earlier this year.

Bond Approval In Phoenicia

PHOENICIA
Voters of the Phoenicia Fire District approved Tuesday night by a 26-1 margin a $20,000 bond issue to help pay for a new pumper vehicle for the Allaben-Shandaken Fire Company. The vote approved an Aug. 8 resolution of the district's fire commissioners. The bond issue, along with capital reserve funds, will go toward the $31,500 purchase price of a new 850-gallon per minute pumper.

Militant Missionaries . . . At Work in Africa

EDITOR'S NOTE—Black or white, there is a new man of God at work in Africa. He stands at the pulpit, but his aim is against the oppression or prejudice of government. Militant and political, he has become the conscience of the emerging black nations, one legacy of the white men who brought Christianity to the continent.

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP)—The white missionary came to Africa to bring Christianity and medical care to the poor benighted heathen. He unwittingly left a spiritual inheritance that he may not have foreseen.

Today, there is a new man of the cloth, white or black, a militant whose goals are missionary in terms of freedom, human rights and independence.

They preach political protest from the pulpit. They challenge bureaucracy, and criticize governments. They defy those in power, and the powerful don't like it. Two white cabinet ministers in Salisbury condemned "political priests" for fighting the independence settlement between England and Rhodesia.

Bishop Abel T. Muzorewa of the United Methodist Church, who rallied black opposition to the deal, responded by calling the officials "preacher politicians."

The black bishop increasingly is under pressure from white authorities.

Elsewhere there are black clergymen who oppose black politicians and in South Africa white clerics who criticize the white government.

Religion often is overlooked as a factor in post-colonial Africa. But churches influence literature, adherents and command enormous respect. In one part states the church is sometimes the only nationally organized body which can effectively challenge government.

Joseph Cardinal Malulu did not object at first when President Joseph Mobutu of Congo (Kinshasa) changed his name to Mobutu Sese Seko and the country's name to Zaire. But the cardinal took exception when the president demanded all his fellow countrymen drop their Christian names in a "return to authenticity."

The Roman Catholic leader soon found himself without an arch-episcopal residence and his church facing official intolerance on grounds it was a "subversive" organization.

This church-state skirmish was not unique. Roman Catholic Archbishop Raymond Tchimbo of Conakry was sentenced to hard labor by Guinean authorities last year. In the Cameroons, Bishop Albert Ndongo had his death sentence commuted to life imprisonment.

Kenya clashed with the National Christian Council over a government measure to impose capital punishment for armed robbery. The government had its way, but the council demonstrated its intention to act on matters of conscience.

The Anglican Dean of Johannesburg was convicted of violating the Terrorism Act last year. He appealed and was acquitted in March and fled the country that same day.

Many of the estimated 180 people deported from South Africa and South West Africa in the last 18 months were churchmen, outspoken in their criticism of apartheid.

The Catholic White Fathers pulled out of Mozambique after deciding that Portugal was using the church, with them as accomplices, to consolidate its control of the territory.

Rhodesia's Bishop Muzorewa seeks political change. Besides his religious duties he heads the African National Council (ANC) which demands black majority rule for Rhodesia. "You know, I can understand that certain whites must think of me as a rabid, antiwhite nationalist," he said. "But I don't hate whites."

The bishop denies he wants all white settlers ousted from the country. Those who "feel that they cannot live under a black government or work with integration. Nor does he demand forced cially compensated and repatriated if that is what they want."

Highway 10... Only Guard Houses

HIGHWAY 10, U.S.S.R. (AP)—Food? Nyet. Coffee? Nyet. Toilet? Nyet. Gasoline? Da, if you can find it. It takes adventure and a masochistic streak to travel this main road linking Russia's two largest cities.

Nothing—not the fearsome Los Angeles Freeway, a Maine logging road or the dangerous Frankfurt-Munich Autobahn—can ever prepare a foreign tourist for the "highway" from Moscow to Leningrad. It must be endured to be believed.

Jerking the unsuspecting traveler back to the 19th century, the two-lane road is a 400-mile dodge'em route featuring a m a m o t h potholes, stray cattle, drunks and people poring buckets of water on wooden yokes.

On the road for the first time, however, the foreigner thinks "This is the Russia I came to see." The peasants and their villages that flank the highway provide a rare opportunity to glimpse Russia as it existed in tsarist times before the 1917 Communist revolution.

But the inns that dotted the road and welcomed the travel-weary nobility in those days are gone... and nothing has replaced them.

Only the ever-present television antennas atop village log houses remind tourists that this is the 20th century.

Most of the houses now have electricity, but their occupants still have to walk to the village water pump with buckets and yokes as their grandparents did 100 years ago.

While the houses have electric lighting, the highway does not. Street lamps are non-existent except in the principal towns along the route, and between them, nothing but total darkness at night.

Should the inquisitive tourist decide to stop for a closer look at Russian village life, there is always the alert GAI or highway patrol, to make sure he does not.

Perched in glass booths above the highway every 40-50 kilometers (25-30 miles), the GAI is there to keep foreigners on the straight and narrow path between the Soviet capital and Leningrad.

All cars—Russian and foreign—are required to crawl past the GAI post at 25 m.p.h., allowing the cop to check foreign license plates and number of occupants. Satisfied, he will wave you on and telephone ahead to the next post.

Woe betide the foreigner who doesn't show up at the check points on schedule. Horses, ducks, cows and Russians may wander unperturbed. But the rule for foreign tourists is no straying and no stopping.

Break the rule and a patrol car complete with two indignant officers will suddenly appear.

There are no such things as extenuating circumstances when it comes to a Soviet militiaman. He's never heard of them.

Witness the case of one American tourist who, desperate for a man's room, made do with the only available spot—the woods—and was caught in the act.

Discarding the Yank's protests that he had already driven 150 kilometers and the next large town was another 100 down the road, the trooper declared: "That's your problem. You're not allowed to stop," and promptly made out a report on the lawbreaker.

The American was not alone in his predicament. Russians lucky enough to own an automobile face the same problems: Where to grab a bite to eat and a coffee and find a rest room?

The Soviet government, facing increasing domestic demands for greater attention to the consumer, has frequently proclaimed that highway restaurants and motels are on the planning board.

And that's where they remain. The few "stolovaya" coffee stands intermittently located on the road are either closed or serve a sweet lukewarm nightmare that's passed off as coffee.

Gas stations are to be found, although it's an unnerving experience to drive mile after mile across Russia watching the fuel needle drop toward empty.

YWCA...An Agency With Something for Everyone

KINGSTON barrier-breaking love of God in keeping in step with the needs of its membership. Another of the United Way agencies is the Young Women's Christian Association which is located at 209 Clinton Avenue. A wide variety of programs is available to women and girls, men and boys, in an effort to draw people together that their lives can be enriched by new and deeper relationships. The programs vary from year to year and are very flexible, decree sets the tone for the women's club monthly meetings. Programming includes lectures, music, fashion shows and a host of other timely activities for this group which has an open membership for all women. For physical activities to keep in shape the YWD (Young Women Diversified), features volleyball, ice skating, bike hikes and for just plain relaxation, bridge, guest speakers or craft work. The YWD meets the first and third Tuesday of each month at 10 a.m.

Service projects, fun and fellowship are the format for the Y-wives. This club meets on the first and third Thursday evenings of each month. Dancing and music programs, bus trips in warmer weather, movie parties and guest speakers round out the program for the Golden Age Club which meets each Monday evening at 7:30. Membership is open to all senior citizens. For the teens, there is an outdoor club which is co-ed for all high school students grades 10-12 who wish to join in group activities.

Activities include swimming, picnics, hikes, bicycle trips and a variety of other activities which contribute to the character building of the youthful members. Held in Rhinebeck at the Southland Farm is one of the newer activities for teens, the riding drill team which meets each Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. Junior High Club involves girls in grades 7-9 in activities programmed to meet their interests and needs. They do baking, cooking, crafts, take trips, go bowling, have slumber parties, etc. There is also a like group in the Saugerties area which serves the younger teens enabling them to participate in similar activities without having to travel the distance into the Kingston "Y".

For any woman seeking to find or further her talents the YWCA offers classes in knitting, macrame, bowling, bridge, sketch classes, piano, sewing, yoga, gymnastics, basic water color and for those anticipating motherhood there is also a class for expectant parents.

A special teen mother's program has been inaugurated by the "Y". This program is for unwed teen-mothers with both pre-natal and post-natal programs which help the young mother not only physically, but also provide the emotional and spiritual support which she so desperately needs at this critical time.

The youth can also take advantage of classes which include lessons in guitar, baton twirling, cooking, sketch, baby sitter training and improvisational workshops just to mention a few.

There are opportunities for everyone to serve and feel useful to this united way agency. Volunteers may serve on committees such as public affairs, teen and adult programs, sorting and folding newspapers for resale, serving as advisor for teen clubs or teaching a class in a field of special interest. Other services include help with printing, folding, etc. of the YWCA monthly newsletter; receptionists or baby-sitting. To round out an exceptional program, the YWCA also sponsors a summer program for children, ages 5-12. Activities for this special group include "Y" and these other agencies crafts, music, outside play, as well as special trips or programs once a week.

The YWCA is only one of the 15 agencies of the United Way that serves our Ulster County. Remember, one gift works many wonders.

Bell Supports Local Environmental Councils

WOODSTOCK Woodstock Assemblyman H. Clark Bell (R) in a statement issued recently said, "Conservation and environment are main topics of conversation. We hear warnings about pollution, waste and predictions of dire consequences. Many concerned citizens have asked what they can do to help. "It isn't easy," Assemblyman Bell said, "the average citizen isn't a trained physician, biologist or chemist. He doesn't have the resources or facilities to make scientific surveys. He can only read or listen to what others say, some of whom are experts, some of whom are not, and then have to try to decide what is right on his own, based upon his research study. "Sometimes we rely on governmental agencies to take the initiative, but they are not always right or effective. Governmental agencies are organized according to law.

They can only do what they are organized and authorized to do. They can not always deal with new situations because there is no provision in their authorization. "One of the reasons that our nation has become great is that we have not always relied on governments to act for us. In fact, in many cases it has been the private citizens or citizens organizations which have led the way. They have established the climate and the political support necessary for government to act effectively," Bell continued. "Recognizing the average citizen does not have the resources or facilities to properly protect and restore the environment, and that citizens are the ones who can effectively lead the way, the New York State Legislature recently enacted legislation authorizing the establishment of local conservation advisory councils." The Woodstock Assemblyman said. These councils are legal entities, established by resolution of the local governing body, such as a village or town board or county legislature. They have the authority and standing of a government agency, but the membership consists of private citizens, volunteers who give of their own time, and are not bound by any political or economic considerations. They have access to professional studies, governmental resources, and if authorized by the governing body, public money. At the same time they are free to praise or criticize, accept or reject as they see fit. This is a good compromise between the government and the people.

"There are some 200 such councils active throughout New York State. There is also a special office in the Department of Environmental Conservation, the Office of Community Assistance, devoted to advising and cooperating with these councils. If you feel that your community needs such an organization, it doesn't have one, talk it over with your local village, town or county legislature representative, and ask him to propose the creation of an advisory council at the next board meeting. "The Legislature has greatly improved and strengthened the law so that the councils are an effective tool which you, the citizen, can use to protect our environment and assure a livable world to our future generations," Bell concluded.

Hinchey Backs Cooke on Review Courts

SAUGERTIES Maurice D. Hinchey Jr., Democratic-Liberal candidate for the State Assembly, today endorsed a proposal of Justice

Lawrence H. Cooke of the Appellate Division for a state panel to oversee imposition of criminal sentences. "The objective of this proposal is the establishment of a special court, possibly composed of experienced criminal trial judges who have a broad background of familiarity with felony cases to insure an equitable and just basis for sentencing offenders. This innovation, which would introduce an additional element of fairness to the state's judicial system, would help greatly to alleviate some of the dissension in and unrest now plaguing the state prison system. The McKay Commission hearings on the subject found that judicial disparity in sentencing is one of the major contributing factors in causing prison unrest.

Flagrant and obvious disparity of criminal justice," Hinchey said. "An adjunct to this proposal is the establishment of a statewide prosecutors office to establish uniform policies for criminal prosecution throughout the state. It should be recognized that today's system provides for little uniformity across the state in handling criminal cases in our courts.

Some prosecutors, despite state laws defining certain offenses, establish their own policies based on what they know they can do, or get away with in a given county and a particular court system. The result is uneven justice, the loss of deterrent effect in criminal punishment and a reduction of the possibility for effective social rehabilitation of the offender.

"The passage of legislation Olive was outlined by Molloy, for the adoption of these Volunteers in each election district have formed telephone block committees and will contact residents by postcard. Families with servicemen will be urged to contact the Board of Elections for absentee ballots for the general election in the state's court system. If I represent the 101st district in November, I intend to support the legislation to bring these much needed reforms about," Hinchey concluded.

Lt. Gov. Wilson Slated for Olivebridge Rally

OLIVEBRIDGE Lieutenant Governor Malcolm Wilson will be guest speaker at the Republican rally to be held at the Olivebridge fire hall on Saturday, Oct. 28.

John Molloy, chairman of the Town of Olive county committee, announced that the public is urged to attend and that all Republican candidates have been invited.

Other events announced at the recent meeting of the Olive Republican Club include a dance and buffet on Saturday, Oct. 21, at the Abbey, Route 28, Boiceville. There is no admission and the public is invited to attend the affair, which will be co-chaired by Mr. and Mrs. E. Lee Denman. Club members will gather at L. Buckley.

Lester Davis Park on Thursday, Oct. 26, to board buses to attend the Republican fund raising dinner at the Granit Hotel and near the address of Sen. James William Davis Jr., chairman of the Republican Community Family Picnic, announced that plans have been completed for the sixth annual family picnic in Lester Davis Park on Sunday, Sept. 10, beginning at noon and continuing all afternoon with a covered dish lunch, dancing, games for children and adults, and prizes and fun for all.

A blitz drive to enroll every eligible voter in the Town of Olive was outlined by Molloy, for the adoption of these Volunteers in each election district have formed telephone block committees and will contact residents by postcard. Families with servicemen will be urged to contact the Board of Elections for absentee ballots for the general election in the state's court system. If I represent the 101st district in November, I intend to support the legislation to bring these much needed reforms about," Hinchey concluded.

Robison Hit on 'Liberal' Voting Record

ENDWELL "Congressman Howard W. Robison's vote against the House of Representatives' attempt to curb the court ordered busing was ultra-liberal, despite the good congressman's protestations to the contrary," Patrick O'Neil, Conservative candidate for Congress charged today.

"I did not have to use a crystal ball or extrapolate from Robison's record of recent years (a record that the American Conservative Union gave a score of 10 out of 100 — identical with Bella Abzug, the radical Congresswoman from New York City.) Robison explained in a press release the reasons for his vote against the House resolution. His whole denial now of those reasons that he himself expressed for his vote seems most unusual," O'Neil said.

"In his initial release, he stated that he considered the House's action as unconstitutional. I hasten to remind him that Article III, section 2 of the Constitution gives the Congress full powers jurisdictions of the federal courts (including the Supreme Court). In declaring the action of the House unconstitutional the Congressman was either unaware of this section of the Constitution, or he was choosing to ignore it — a common liberal failing," O'Neil contended.

"In trying to squirm out of his previously stated pro-busing position by associating himself with John Ashbrook, Robison let the cat out of the bag by admitting that he and Ashbrook voted against the measure 'for to restrict the appellate different reasons,' Ashbrook favors a stronger action to stop forced busing totally. Robison attempting to give the impression now that this is his position," O'Neil asked. "In the final irony of the Robison statement is the fact that he is now emphasizing busing in the southern states. The fact is that de facto segregation exists in both north and south: Michigan, for example, Robison does not explain how he will get busing orders applied exclusively to the south. Is there not to be one rule of law for the entire country?"

"The passage of legislation Olive was outlined by Molloy, for the adoption of these Volunteers in each election district have formed telephone block committees and will contact residents by postcard. Families with servicemen will be urged to contact the Board of Elections for absentee ballots for the general election in the state's court system. If I represent the 101st district in November, I intend to support the legislation to bring these much needed reforms about," Hinchey concluded.

Credit Management Formed in County

KINGSTON will have greater impact on state and national credit issues. An improvement in customer service and understanding is also expected through the organization.

In an effort to improve the cooperation and communication between area representatives of the credit community, an Ulster Credit Management Association has recently been formed.

Through a series of meetings and conferences representatives of nearly every consumer credit granting business in the county have established the organization for the purposes of education, information and the exchange of ideas and experiences.

It is expected that through the association area credit executives will become better informed on current and proposed credit related legislation. Another advantage expected is that local opinions

Cox in Boston For Reade on Temporary Duty

OAKHURST, N.J. Daniel Cox, city manager for the Walter Reade Organization in Kingston, left today to handle the additional duties of supervising Walter Reade's Boston based theaters. The Reade Organization is currently in the process of building a triplex theater in Boston and presently operates 2 first-run situations.

Cox will return to Kingston when his assignment is completed. Margaret Thomas, manager of the Community Theatre in Kingston, will succeed Cox on a temporary basis as city manager for the theaters. Cox will oversee the Kingston houses from Boston.

Announcement of the shift came Friday from the Walter Reade Organization in New York. Cox is expected to return within "a short time."

Banker Group Supports Debt Ceiling

WASHINGTON. The American Bankers Association has announced its support of a proposed 250 billion ceiling on federal spending.

Allen P. Stults, president of the ABA, said legislation to impose the ceiling on fiscal 1973 expenditures was endorsed by the association's board of directors.

Stults said the 23-member board unanimously adopted a resolution expressing concern about "the resumption of inflationary pressures and their potentially adverse impact upon the American people and the U.S. economy."

"The discipline of a rigid expenditure ceiling would alleviate the immediate danger of generating an excessively expansionary deficit," the resolution continued.

As a second step, said Stults, the bankers proposed a four-point program to develop permanent measures to control spending:

- Adoption of multi-year budget projections for total spending and specific programs. This will permit lawmakers to assess the ultimate costs of programs.
- Assign definite termination dates to new spending programs, and to existing programs of questionable value.
- Create a joint Congressional committee to evaluate the federal budget as a whole.
- Subject trust fund programs to budgetary review, expenditure control, and accountability procedures applied to other tax-supported programs.

Poughkeepsie's M. Schwartz Co.

Key Mover to Improve Future

By TIM SCHUSTER

POUGHKEEPSIE — "All things to all men . . . the successful Main Street Store" was the cover story in "Clothes," an apparel trade magazine several years ago.

The article referred to M. Schwartz and Co., known for more than 100 years as one of the leading men's wear retailers in the Hudson Valley.

The Freeman spoke recently with Ronald Morris, president and co-owner of the store with John D. Connor, and asked him why the operation was so financially successful and what effects urban renewal and shopping center competition had on his Main Street store.

And the store is successful. With the massive refurbishing of the old store and doubling of selling space in 1963 to include women's and "student" shops to complement the men's wear and boys' wear the store annually grosses better than $2 million in sales.

When an opportunity arose 18 months ago to add a branch store in the well-kept city of Pittsfield, Mass., Connor and Morris jumped at it and joined with their boys' wear manager Warren Davis in starting another downtown location.

"It's doing quite well," commented Morris. The fate of downtown Poughkeepsie as a major retail center, as is true of most older cities, is delicately balanced at the moment.

"When we did renovation we hoped it would inspire others," said Morris somewhat wistfully.

A few followed suit, but not enough to make much difference. Several of the large, old Main Street department stores have indicated their intentions to move to new shopping centers to the south on Route 9, and whether they retain their Poughkeepsie operations is as yet unclear.

Swartz and Co. is also interested in adding a branch facility at some shopping center, to make up for any business loss experienced in the main store and perhaps contribute even greater profits.

The IBM personnel make up a very important segment of the clientele, especially contributing to the sale of business suits of fine quality, and a large percentage of these people reside in the burgeoning southern part of Dutchess County.

But some plans for downtown Poughkeepsie promise to give the Queen City of the Hudson new life, if they are fulfilled.

Included among those is the massive pouring of urban renewal funds into four separate projects, with the closest being the City Hall project.

One large block remains vacant on the west side of New Market Street. While it was hoped that large retailers would invest in the site, it remains barren and is a temporary parking lot.

Another concept that is being "kicked around," according to Morris, is closing down two blocks of Main Street to traffic and develop a pedestrian mall, including 303 Main where Schwartz and Co. is located.

But the proposal which has brought about the greatest recent excitement is one to purchase an entire city block from urban renewal and develop it through private enterprise.

This block, bordered by Main, New Market, Mill, and Garden Streets, would be the site for a 10-story office building for use primarily by financial institutions and professional people, with some retail outlets.

The plan was instituted a year ago and kept under wraps until July, 1972 when a meeting was held including the private parties, urban renewal, Model Cities Agency, and representatives of the city government. The first undertaking would be to acquire title from Poughkeepsie Urban Renewal Agency.

Other facilities envisioned are a four-story building; a three or four story parking garage; and retention of a church, bank, and two office buildings currently on the site.

The McCann Foundation has also offered to fund one-third of a civic complex, including a skating rink, if urban renewal and the City of Poughkeepsie will contribute a third each. And investors are hoping to attract a motel from a national chain.

M. Schwartz and Co. has been instrumental in pushing for those and other beneficial changes to keep downtown a viable place in which to live, shop, and do business, and both Morris and Connor have been actively involved in directorships at area institutions and in trying to improve the business climate.

M. Schwartz and Co. sees its duty not only to its 75 employees and its many customers from all over the mid-Hudson Valley, but has tried to live up to its proclamation of being "all things to all men" in areas outside the retailing of quality clothing.

Red Hook District ... Centralized in 1937

By TIM SCHUSTER

RED HOOK Many school districts throughout the country were centralized during the 1930s, with additional impetus provided by the availability of Works Progress Administration funds, but in Red Hook the need was made even more evident when the Red Hook School was destroyed by fire on April 2, 1936.

Within ten days all the members of the various classes had resumed school work. The grades were housed about the village in the Red Hook Hotel, Barn, Lutheran Chapel, and the Rigas House, and high school students were transported by bus to Pine Plains.

On April 14 William Tremper, superintendent of schools, appeared before the Board of Trustees at a meeting held in the Aucock Building. Rebuilding, centralization and methods of procedure were discussed.

About two months later, the board filed an application through the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works for a grant to aid in financing the construction and equipment of a public school building and the purchase of a suitable site.

With enthusiasm mounting among the then eleven school districts to be combined, some anxiety was felt by Aug. 1, 1937 because of the delay in obtaining official assignment of the grant from the federal government.

On Oct. 26, 1937 teachers and pupils, with banners and placards, marched to the Methodist Chapel where voters from eleven districts were to decide the fate of the proposed Red Hook Central School, now known as the Linden Avenue School.

When the votes were counted 866 voted yes and 117 no. The new school board was elected the same evening.

The old district schools had a long history and had each served the public well in its own way. Here are some comments on each from the official dedication brochure for the central school, dated Sept. 6, 1939.

The Elmendorph School, established in 1813, was then the only school in town. The first known teacher was Platt Smith, who was paid $14 per month, with contributions of firewood and occasional meals thrown in. It might be interesting to note the increase in wages. In 1904, $32 per month; 1913, $40 per month; 1919, $48; 1923, $84.50; 1933, $92; and teachers started at an annual salary of $7,800 in 1971.

Upper Red Hook, district six, was a two-story building that replaced the old building, built in 1829. Maximum recorded attendance was 40 pupils.

Barrytown School, district eight, was built about 1857. Previous to this the children of this district attended the Annandale School, and it was recorded that the long walk in winter worked great hardships on them.

Annandale School, district

Pastoral Care ... Some Reflections

RHINEBECK Editor's Note: Last spring a five-week seminar on pastoral care for the patient and his family was held at Northern Dutchess Hospital with many area clergymen participating. The goal was to discover more effective ways in dealing with the patient, who is often undergoing a traumatic experience. The Rev. Henry Maortens of the Third Lutheran Church, Rhinebeck, as one of the seminar's participants has presented his reflections and observations.

"A person changes when he becomes a hospital patient. This once independent person suddenly becomes very much dependent on other people. Hospital rules, doctor's orders, bed confinement, routine that makes sense only to the staff. All these confront him."

The Rev. Maortens became very much aware of the extra worries that beset this patient.

"A hospital patient does a lot of thinking, and he keeps a lot of it to himself. How sick am I? Who will take care of my family, my children, my wife, my husband while I'm hospitalized?"

"Often the patient feels alone. He experiences the feeling of homesickness that comes upon one who is separated from those he loves."

Finances are a source of worry. Also self-esteem. "Will I be able to function normally? Will I be able to return to work?"

And he felt that the patient needs someone to whom he can express his anxieties, someone whom he can trust and who will be understanding.

Once the patient can "unload," he then can mobilize his resources toward health. "And it is at this moment . . . that the minister becomes a member of the hospital healing team."

The Rev. Maortens said that the seminar opened a door to the future. "During the weekly meetings the group realized how many ministers work alone, trying to do everything themselves, seldom consulting with one another. This seminar demonstrated the valuable insight to be gained from consultation — the need not to struggle alone."

With this goal in mind, several clergymen have decided to form a consultation group, meeting regularly with a specialist in the field of pastoral counseling and parish ministry.

"For everyone concerned," he stated, "it will be an opportunity for professional growth through consultation."

Superintendent Post Is Rhinebeck Contest

RHINEBECK Only one post will be up for grabs in the Town of Rhinebeck this November, and the incumbent highway superintendent is out to see that he retains his job.

Oran Van Etten, appointed last February to fill the unexpired term vacated by George Wyant, has stated his intention of running for reelection.

The local Republic Party Committee will caucus Aug. 28 at the town hall to nominate its candidate, and it is expected that Van Etten will be designated. He is a lifelong resident of the town.

White Schoolhouse, district four, was originally built in 1815. One resident remembered his teacher in 1861, Amy Cornago it was known as the Nelson Schoolhouse, and is thought to have been the first Little Red School.

Neighborhood schools were used more in times past for civic affairs, acting as a community center, than the central schools do now. Rock City School, district seven, was no exception.

School terms were arranged with a winter and summer term. It was customary to hire a man teacher for the winter and a woman for the summer. Anyone who wanted to teach might apply to the superintendent, who had full power to issue a permit. Very often a farmer taught school in the winter and worked his farm in the summer.

The original Nevis School, district two, was probably built in 1779, and an aged resident recalled that the attendance of 40 pupils was halved when spring work began on the farms.

MEASURING NOSES — "You wanna measure noses?" Don McCarty, of Fridley, Minn., appears to be doing just that as he has a friendly chat with his pet crow, Corky. Corky is very friendly and sociable. "One day Corky was on a fence and a drunk came along" said McCarty. "He started talking to Corky and it was a hilarious scene. The drunk was weaving in one direction and Corky, on his one good leg, weaving in the other." (UPI TELEPHOTO)

Patrols Chinese Border

Gurkha Warrior . . . Fierce

HONG KONG (AP)—Charging along the narrow ravine as flashes of gunfire lit up the dark night sky, Subedar (Captain) Lalbahadur Thapa leaped into the enemy machine gun post and swung his kukri.

Twice the curved steel blade slashed viciously and each time a man died. Firing his revolver with his other hand, Lalbahadur shot and killed two more men.

He scrambled up the defile in the face of withering fire, eventually reaching the crest and killing two more men with his kukri. Two soldiers with him backed to death another two defenders.

From the top of Rass-Ez Zouai Ridge, Lalbahadur and his companions covered the company's advance up the precipitous path. Kukris were used freely in the hand-to-hand fighting which ensued before the whole area was captured.

For his bravery, Lalbahadur became the first Gurkha in World War II to win the Victoria Cross, Britain's highest battle honor.

The action took place at Wadi Akarit in North Africa in the pre-dawn hours of April 6, 1943, as the British Eighth Army, still flushed by victory at El Alamein, assaulted heavily defended German and Italian positions 200 miles south of Tunis.

The Wadi Akarit attack was typical of the type of fighting which has won the Gurkhas their almost legendary reputation. Like other fighters who storm their enemy's lines with bayonets or knives, they cause widespread fear and panic.

The sturdy squat hillmen from Nepal have a traditional fondness for fighting with their kukris. These are the heavy-bladed, all-purpose curved knives with the cutting edge on the inside of the curve.

Crossed kukris form the Gurkha symbol.

In combat, the Gurkhas are ruthless, highly disciplined and loyal warriors.

At leisure, they are fun-loving and happy, and are frugal savers.

The name Gurkha stems from the small principality of Gorkha whose king in the 18th century conquered most of what is now Nepal. British mispronunciation of Gorkha led to the present name.

The Gurkhas, in the words of one of their early British officers, are "the stubborn and indomitable peasants of Nepal."

Since 1815, when their bravery in fighting against the British East India company led to their being recruited by their enemies, they have soldiered with distinction for Britain.

The cheery brown faces of these tough little fighters, often revealing their Mongolian descent, belie their fierce courage under fire. They have won 13 Victoria Crosses and many other awards for valor in two world wars and other battles.

Since World War II they have been troubleshooters for Britain in Asia, fighting communist guerrillas in Malaya and Indonesians in Borneo and standing firm against communist rioters in Hong Kong.

In 1972 they moved their home base from Sungai Patani, in Malaysia, to Sek Kong, in Hong Kong.

Hong Kong, Britain's last military outpost east of Suez, will remain their home for the foreseeable future.

Here they share with other British troops the task of patrolling this colony's 22-mile land frontier with China, watching across the border and gathering information on the activities of Chinese soldiers and civilians. They are also ready to support Colonial authorities in any emergency, as they did in 1967.

In line with Britain's Far East and Near East cutback in military strength, they have been reduced from 15,000 at the time of the Malayan anti-guerilla fighting to 6,700.

One battalion is in Britain, performing duties which include mounting the guard at Buckingham Palace. Its presence releases British troops for duty in Northern Ireland, but Gurkhas will not be sent to this trouble spot because it would be, as a senior officer said, a "politically unwise move."

Another battalion is serving in Borneo under a British defense agreement with the Sultan of Brunei.

The Gurkhas are commanded by British officers who have a tremendous admiration for them and display a deep loyalty for their men that is returned in full.

They rely heavily on the Queen's Gurkha Officers—Gurkhas who have come up through the ranks after usually 14 to 16 years service but whose commission is junior to the British officer.

The Gurkha motto is "kaphar hunnu bhandu marnu ramro"—it is better to die than to be a coward.

Tremendous endurance marks the sporting feats of the Gurkhas, who are used to arduous walking on the steep slopes of the greatest mountains in the world, the Himalayas.

An average height of about five feet four inches and a weight of 140 to 160 pounds are a handicap in many sports, but the short, muscular legs of the Gurkhas keep pounding away tirelessly. They often win because while their opponents are flagging at the finish they are going as strong as ever.

Compared to troops from Britain, the Gurkha is poorly equipped with a full British complement. Even allowing for the fact that the Gurkha gets his quarters, food and clothing free same rank.

while the British soldier must pay for his, he is far worse off.

His pay scale is restricted by agreements between Britain, India and Nepal in 1947, when colonial India was partitioned into independent India and Pakistan. The Gurkhas, who had been part of Britain's Indian Army, were divided between the British and Indians forces and Britain agreed not to pay them more than the Indians did.

There are about 100,000 Gurkhas in the Indian Army and their pay is low. The British, under the pretext of meeting higher living costs, give their Gurkhas allowances which are more than their basic pay.

While this still leaves them below the rate for their English counterparts, it is a high wage for men used to scraping a hard living from rugged hill-sides in Nepal. Remittances from Gurkhas form one of Nepal's greatest sources of income.

The system in Gurkha regiments is essentially British officers leading Gurkha soldiers.

But in a break with the past, some Gurkhas are being sent to Sandhurst and Mons military colleges in England and emerge with a full British commission, equal in status to that of a British officer with the Gurkhas.

ANIMAL INTEGRATION — Stinky, that's the giraffe, seems to have stuck her nose into a lot of trouble as she meets Alice, the rhino, when they were removed from separate quarters and turned loose to roam freely among the cars of visitors to Lion Country Safari, in W. Palm Beach, Fla. Spokesman for the tourist attraction said the new integration, which includes the elephants, seems to be working out alright. (UPI TELEPHOTO)

Restoring Autos Is Challenging

CAMBRIDGE, Md. (AP) — "I'll tackle anything that comes along," says Dale Price. "It's the challenge that's the biggest part."

Among the challenges that recently creaked into his workshop here on the Chesapeake Bay's eastern shore are a dilapidated 1934 Ford Model A roadster, a 1907 White Steamer and an 1899 Kelsey-Tilney.

Price takes his charges apart "down to the last bolt," then repairs and restores them, mostly for the Smithsonian Institution's highway collection.

"It generally takes about a year to restore the average antique automobile," Price explained. "I do it myself. I don't have anyone working for me, but once in a while I subcontract part of a job."

When he has cleared the current backlog, Price plans to start work on an 1868 velocipede (front-wheel drive bicycle) for the Smithsonian.

"They weren't very good record keepers," he says of the company that built the century-old bike. "I'll have to do some research."

Don Berkebile, the Smithsonian's highway collection specialist, has another "challenge" awaiting shipment to Price: A rare 1912 Knox tractor, forerunner of the modern tractor trailer.

"It took me five years to locate it and another three years to raise the money to buy it," Berkebile said. "I wouldn't entrust it to anyone but Price."

Price, 51, opened an auto repair business after a four-year stint in the Marines in World War II and became involved with antique cars as a hobby. He has been restoring pieces for the Smithsonian since the late 1950s.

"I prefer historical vehicles. The older and more ingenious the vehicle, the better," Price says.

Untroubled by the knowledge that most of the cars he restores will never run again, Price confesses that "sometimes I run them just for fun before shipping them to Washington."

"They aren't fit for the turnpike anyway. Now everything centers on turnpike driving."

Price owns two cars, a late model Buick and a 1940 Plymouth that "you can't really call an antique."

As for their care, he turns them over to mechanics downtown.

Modern cars, he says, have made the backyard auto mechanic obsolete.

"Modern cars don't need you," Price said.

New Underground Tomb Discovered

ISTANBUL (AP) — The catacombs of Istanbul are less famous than those of Rome but probably just as extensive. A new discovery has confirmed archeologists' suspicions that much of Istanbul is honeycombed with underground tombs and cemeteries of the Byzantine period.

The latest addition to Istanbul's known catacombs came to light recently under the busy Aksaray area, in the center of what was Byzantium. Municipal workers digging sewage lines broke into the roof of an eight-room complex 15 feet below the surface.

The catacombs include two floors, of which only the upper is accessible. The lower floor is flooded, and it may not be possible to investigate it.

The upper floor is 90 feet long by 20 feet wide, and the ceiling is about 7 feet high. The catacombs, termed "hypogae" by archeologists, date from the sixth century AD and probably were built in the reign of Justinian the Great.

Dr. Nezih Firatli of the Istanbul Antiquities Department is a specialist in such underground tombs. He says those discovered in Aksaray were part of a vast complex of cemeteries spread out along both sides of the Mese, the main street of Byzantium.

"These are communal tombs for one ward of the city," he said. "They are tombs for ordinary people, not for the upper classes. The upper classes had elaborately painted hypogae."

One princely Byzantine grave he is investigating is near Iznik, the ancient Nicea. This chamber is decorated with brightly-colored frescoes showing peacocks in a garden.

The Aksaray tombs are roughly plastered and there are no traces of decoration.

Inside, Firatli and his colleagues found five or six large amphorae once used for wine, and other pieces of terracotta.

The Byzantines, despite their Christian beliefs, seem to have taken out an insurance policy by providing their dead with foodstuffs for the after-life in the style of their pagan predecessors.

No bones were found in the catacombs. Firatli said the tombs had been opened at some time in the Middle Ages, and the bones may have been removed then. Alternatively the bones may have rotted—the area has been under more than a foot of water for centuries.

Council Acts on Trucks, Lots

By HUGH REYNOLDS

The City of Kingston aldermen spent more than $275,000 Tuesday night at the Common Council meeting appropriating $147,447 for four new snow fighters, $66,000 for parking lots in Central Broadway and another $62,600 as the city's share of Phase II of the Rondout Recreation Center.

The parking lots in Central Broadway have been a long time coming and arrived among some controversy last night. The three parcels, the Sussini Properties at 349-353 and 355 Broadway, the Beck property at 656-658 Broadway and the Cuneo property at 614-616 Broadway will be purchased for a total of $1,000, $23,000 for the Sussini Properties and $18,000 for the Beck building (the city owns the Cuneo Building.) Another $25,000 is earmarked for demolition costs. But Alderman Clifford G. Sinsabaugh (D-10th Ward) and Edward M. Norton (D-11th Ward) wanted the cost figures on the entire project, which is to say, the cost of paving. According to Special Central Broadway Committee Chairman Donald E. Quick (D-Sixth Ward), the paving costs are not now available, but will be included in the 1973 budget. Sinsabaugh also opposed the city purchase of parking lots for private businesses.

The buying of the snowfighters looked like a dead issue when the aldermen voted 10-2 against the purchase of four Oskosh Snow Fighters with manual transmissions. But then Finance Chairman John E. Finch (D-Fifth Ward) produced another resolution calling for the purchase of Walters Snow Fighters and that passed by a 10-2 vote with Brian D. Smith (R-Third Ward) and Thomas M. Davitt (R-Seventh Ward) abstaining. Abstentions are counted as negative votes in the Council.

Smith abstained from voting, he said, because he was opposed to a bond issue for the trucks, contending that equipment should be paid for out of current budget funds. On the other hand, he said he felt the city needed the equipment to fight storms this winter. It will replace equipment that is up to 25 years old. Smith, in opposing the bond issue, and suggesting that the equipment be paid for over the next two years, an arrangement he said was satisfactory to the manufacturers, noted that the Council had approved $1,340,000 in new bond issues this year. "It has to stop somewhere, gentlemen," he said.

The alderman, by giving Mayor Francis R. Koenig permission to sign contracts with the federal government for Phase II of the Rondout Center, also obligated the city to $62,600 as its share of the project. The federal government will pay $126,400 toward the $189,000 cost of the construction of a gymnasium on top of Phase I at Broadway and Spring Street.

Also on tap was a letter from Mayor Koenig citing Gilbert E. Gray on his election as commander of the Marine Corps League. It is believed to be the first time a resident of Kingston has been commander of a national veterans organization. Koenig asked the Council to form a committee to properly honor Gray.

There was a good deal of debate about truck traffic in the city. Alderman Joseph McGrane presented a petition with 307 names opposed to truck traffic on Washington Avenue. Alderman Titus B. Sims then asked McGrane where he expected the traffic to go if it didn't go through his (McGrane's) Ward. The answer seemed to be that it would wind up in Sims' Ward. Again the alderman agreed that truck traffic was a city-wide problem which does not lend itself to easy solutions.

Alderman Peter J. Mancuso (D-12th Ward) who filled in for Council President T. Robert Gallo (Gallo was acting mayor in the absence of Koenig) had a resolution passed taking a swimming pool owned by John and Laura Fabiano of 27 New Street off the tax rolls. The pool, an above ground model, has been taxed for the past four years, and according to the city charter, it's not supposed to be. Mancuso emphasized that he was not in favor of taxing above-the-ground pools.

Two Uptown Urban Renewal redevelopers were approved,

Ellenville Opening

ELLENVILLE A strike vote had been out", and some language to be clarified. All was expected to go smoothly, at least from the teachers' point of view, as school opened today for the Ellenville Central School District. Clark Bloom, president of the Ellenville Teachers Association, said Tuesday the teachers would give "our full cooperation in getting school open." A new contract is not yet ready for signing, according to Bloom. He said there were "a few small points to be ironed

BACK TO SCHOOL — A special mixture of excitement and anticipation, tinged with regret, faced thousands of Ulster County youngsters who returned to school today. Among the many who bid a sad farewell to the carefree days of summer were (L.R) Sandy and Samantha Brown, Kim Barnhart and Tommy Brown. Pushed as Bicentennial Battle of Yorktown...

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When the nation starts its big bicentennial celebration four years from now, Virginia history buffs argue the Battle of Yorktown site should be a center of attention.

In the 1781 battle, Gen. Washington and his French ally, Gen. Lafayette, overwhelmed British troops led by Lord Cornwallis. The victory made a reality of the independence that had been declared in 1776.

"What I want to highlight is, if that moment had not taken place we wouldn't be having a bicentennial," says Dorothy Bottom, executive editor of the Times Herald and Daily Press of Newport News, Va.

One way to appreciate her idea of "highlighting" that surrender scene of 191 years ago is to enter a brick building standing in a city park in Atlanta—the site of another battle—and mount a huge, stage-lit center platform.

World's Largest Painting
All around you—north, south, east and west, from horizon to horizon and at even your very feet—the famed Battle of Atlanta rages in silent pantomime as it did in 1864, late in the Civil War.

So faithful is it to historical reality that if the building walls evaporated you would see red hills coinciding with the pictured scene.

What you really see is a painting on canvas, claimed to be the world's largest, that reaches upward 50 feet. It is formed into a cylinder that is 400 feet around. The platform you stand on is inside this cylinder, or "Cyclorama."

In the foreground, below the platform level, three dimensional figurines of Union and Confederate soldiers and mock-up landscape merge into the painting so cleverly the eye cannot locate the dividing point.

Cyclorama enthusiasts claim modern zoom cameras, wide angle projections and other modern devices do not equal Cycloramas in creating breathtaking illusions of three dimensional reality.

Wants Yorktown Cyclorama
Another Cyclorama depicting a Civil War scene is at the National Park on the site of the Battle of Gettysburg in Pennsylvania, but there is yet no Cyclorama depicting a revolutionary war scene.

Mrs. Bottom, who has wanted a Cyclorama for Yorktown ever since she saw the one in Atlanta several years ago, believes the bicentennial celebration offers an ideal opportunity.

The National Park Service has restored the battle site and surrender field and for several million dollars more could top off this attraction with a new Cyclorama, Mrs. Bottom says.

Parks Director George B. Hartzog Jr. has said in his correspondence on the subject that "some sort of three dimensional presentation should be included before we are completed ... but we hope that it will be a part of the Yorktown story and not a major attraction in its own right."

Val., whose district embraces Newport News and Yorktown, is working with Mrs. Bottom on the project.

Downing has been a Cyclorama enthusiast since he saw one at the site of the Battle of Waterloo during a trip to Europe. He said it "would be the most dramatic way of showing citizens of this country up a team of artists to do the what actually happened at the work."

But at the moment Parks Service spokesmen talk about the obstacles. Time is short.

"Where are the artists?" one said. "You don't just take a Cyclorama off the shelf."

Downing believes the Parks Service could finance it out of existing revenue without congressional approval if it wants to. He said his next move may be to try to interest the Bicentennial Commission in taking action.

Downing and Mrs. Bottom believe they can easily round up a team of artists to do the work.

Downing apparently also shares Mrs. Bottom's belief that it is now or almost never.

"In my opinion, the government can afford to do this and unless we press for it in connection with the bicentennial we more than likely would have to wait another 50 years," he wrote Mrs. Bottom.

Anti-Semitism . . . On Rise in Italy

By BARRY JAMES

ROME (UPI)—With a swing right in Italian politics, the specter of anti-Semitism has re-emerged in a country otherwise noted for its tolerance.

Telephoned threats to individual Jews, attacks on Jewish students in schools, swastikas daubed on Jewish community buildings, a spate of books and tracts disparaging the Jews and three synagogues and a cemetery profaned are the symptoms of the disease.

Opinions differ about its gravity.

"Very grave," said Prof. Alfonso di Nola, who has helped form a Roman Catholic committee to combat anti-Semitism.

"No immediate danger," said the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Pietro Rossano, a Vatican official who joined the committee in a private capacity. "We should not blow on the fire by reacting too dramatically."

Outbreaks Stepped Up
Prof. Augusto Segre, who belongs to a parallel Jewish committee, said the problem is "alarming" even though probably confined to a minority of neo-Fascists and neo-Nazis.

The Rev. Cornelius Rijk, who heads the Vatican office for Catholic-Jewish relations, said anti-Semitism in Italy is "not a large movement, but it is apparently on the increase and could become dangerous in a time of crisis."

Anti-Semitic outbreaks have stepped up with the rising fortunes of the extreme right, which did well in the national election this May.

But anti-Semitism also gets a boost from anti-Israeli publications of the extreme left, some of which, Jewish community leaders believe, are financed by the information departments of Arab embassies. The Italian Communist party declares itself to be firmly opposed to any form of anti-Semitism, however.

New Path Charted
In a country which has only 35,000 Jews in a predominantly Roman Catholic population of 55 million, the attitude of the Church is crucial. Some Jews say it has not done enough to stem anti-Semitism.

Segre, who is cultural director of the Union of Jewish Communities in Italy, asked in a recent article whether the Church had done all it could "to move from their immobility, members of the Christian community who still look on the Jews as though they were people from another world, or enemies, or as the murderers of God."

The Vatican Ecumenical Council charted a new path for Catholic-Jewish relations when it ruled in 1965 that Christ's death "cannot be blamed upon the Jews then living, without distinction, nor upon the Jews of today... the Jews should not be presented as repudiated or cursed by God."

But as Rijk said, "the council did not change mentalities. We still have to educate people and this will take time."

Jews Spared Exile
Vatican sources said Pope Paul VI hesitates to make a gesture in favor of the Jews when this might jeopardize the 2,756,000 Roman Catholics living in Arab countries and worsen rivalry between Catholicism and Islam in black Africa.

But apart from this, Jewish leaders ask why the Vatican does not discipline priests who cling to pre-council ideas about the Jews. Segre said a small number of Roman Catholic clergymen "remains attached to a medieval conception of... the Jews, looking back with nostalgia on the times when it was legitimate to lock them in a ghetto and send them to the stake."

Anti-Semitism in Italy seems usually to have been tempered by a degree of tolerance. Although Jews were discriminated against during World War II, they were spared exile and the worst excesses of pogroms elsewhere in Europe.

When dictator Benito Mussolini came to power in the early 1920s, 5,000 Jews joined his blackshirted Fascists. It was not until 1938 that Mussolini emulated Adolf Hitler by decreeing race laws. Although Italian Jews suffered with their fellows elsewhere, it was more at the hands of German occupiers than of Italians.

Stake Is Large

Many Roman Jews found refuge from the Nazis and Fascists with religious organizations or with their Christian neighbors—accounting for an upsurge of mixed marriages after the war. Israeli embassy officials reckon that about 5,000 Jews have emigrated since the war.

Those who stayed have become so assimilated that they are indistinguishable from their Christian neighbors, and they have a large stake in small and medium commerce.

For this reason, Jewish community leaders are worried that a resurgence of anti-Semitism might flout the harmony that has been built at the cost of considerable suffering over many centuries.

YESTERYEAR—This photo of a painting depicts papal guards of yesteryear maintaining order as a Jewish congregation is forced to listen to a Christian sermon.

The specter of Anti-semitism in the bastion of Christendom has once again arisen, with the swing to the right in Italian politics. (UPI TELEPHOTO)

Black Power To S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — The stirrings of Black Power have come to South Africa.

Jerry Modisane, president of the exclusively black South African Student's Organization (SASO), voiced the aim: "We do not need the cooperation of the white man anymore. We do not want him. We are fighting to liberate ourselves from the shackles of perpetual servitude."

Surprisingly, no national outcry followed his remarks—unusually strong in South Africa—made to newsmen after SASO's annual congress this summer at Hammanskraal about 60 miles north of Johannesburg.

The congress, which lasted a week, began by expelling white newsmen representing the anti-government Rand Daily Mail when the newspaper, in its reports, used the term "non-whites" to refer to the 200 African, Indian and Colored students attending. Three unofficial white student observers from the University of the Witwatersrand also were asked to leave.

Congress officials said the gathering was for "blacks only."

Violence Shunned

Next, it expelled its former president, Temba Sono, for suggesting to the congress it should work together with "non-white" leaders of semi-independent tribal homelands within the framework of separate development (Apartheid).

SASO, an entirely non-white student movement, was established four years ago with a membership of about 4,000, drawn from the five African, Indian and Colored universities and those non-whites still studying on white campuses, such as the universities of the Witwatersrand and Cape Town.

Modisane said the organization wants no violence. SASO aims to promote "black consciousness," he said. "Black consciousness and black solidarity are the roots of our movement. And they will act as conveyor belts towards liberation."

He said SASO has turned its back on all groups of all races which in any way work within the system of Apartheid. I include in this group the Christian churches of South Africa, the Natal Indian Congress, the Colored Labor party and the Colored Federal party. In particular, we have no time for the Christian churches in South Africa. They are known to go only where the power is. That power is with the white man."

Synonym for Oppression

Modisane said "it is impossible for whites of any conviction to know the ideals of the blacks. Therefore, it is impossible for blacks to work hand in hand with whites."

SASO executive member Steve Biko told the congress that "the myth of integration as propagated under the banner of the liberal ideology, must be broken and killed. It leads people to believe something is being done. But the artificially created integrated groups are merely an anaesthetic for the black man while it soothes the guilty conscience of the whites."

Said SASO Secretary-General Barney Pitso: "To us, blackness is a synonym for oppression, an identification of the disowned, the rejected people and the wretched of the earth. I am not striving to become a white man's equal but I am determined to assert my value as a God-created being. I must show that I am a person."

Despite the strong tone of the congress, it was not completely denounced by pro-government commentators.

Ban May Be Inevitable

The political columnist Jors Troelle of Die Vaderland wrote: "Do not throw aside SASO as a bunch of cheeky kaffirs." He said the Afrikaner nation—which fought the Boer War against the British to preserve their Afrikaans identity—and ruling National party supporters could "sympathize" with SASO's brand of nationalism, with some reservations.

"We—quite correctly—created schools and universities for the black man and the opportunity of developing his own politics and national pride. It is understandable and also right that he should become aware of his own value as a person and strive for his rightful place in South Africa," the columnist said.

But, he added, while SASO "for the moment does not advocate violence (it) moves in a dangerous direction especially in its aim of forming a united front for which the only cement is an emotional and all-encompassing anti-white feeling. With its positive principles, SASO can make a dynamic contribution to the future of the black man. But its negative side can only lead it to self-destruction."

There have been no indications that the government might move against SASO, but a widely respected political analyst, Prof. Willem Kleyhans of the University of Pretoria, said SASO would ultimately be banned.

Eskimo Women Help in TB Prevention

Witch Doctor Lessons . . . Used in Canadian Arctic

MONTREAL (AP)—Lessons learned from an African witch doctor are being applied in the Canadian Arctic.

Dr. Alex Williams of the Frobisher General Hospital, who worked four years in Africa, has trained 12 Eskimo women to help administer a TB prevention program combatting one of the rampant diseases of the North.

The program, set up after long consultations with "Eskimo leaders who had the ear of the people," gives the women responsibility for tracking down potential TB victims and making sure they take anti-TB drugs three times a week.

Williams said the program was spawned by his experiences in Africa, which showed "we should involve local people other than just tell them what's good for them."

"A lot of suspicion of white man's medicine in the world is failure to explain things to people," he said.

Williams said that in Africa the sick first consult a witch doctor who might suggest a hospital if the patient is extremely ill and does not respond to his ministrations.

To overcome the ensuing inefficiency, Williams set up clinics where both he and a witch doctor sat.

"I learned a great deal from him, mainly background about the patients—he has enormous power as a religious person and knows people well," Williams said. "His main use was in explaining certain bizarre symptomology."

Strange complaints such as nightmares, palpitations, headaches and hallucinations which "would have a doctor trained in Western medicine scratching his head a long while" were easily explained by the witch doctor in terms of tribal culture such as punishment for basic codes broken.

Complaints baffling to the witch doctor, such as a diabetic coma, were deftly dealt with by the doctor.

"It worked very well," said Williams.

He said there is no equivalent of the witch doctor in the North, though some Eskimos are said to be shamans. But the principle of involving local people is fundamental.

In Frobisher, the 12 Eskimo women are responsible for 350 persons placed on anti-TB drugs because their X-rays and sputum and skin tests showed they risked contracting the disease. The Eskimo is 60 times more likely to get TB than the white.

Through a nurse-interpreter, the 12 Eskimo women were given a basic understanding of the disease, examining TB germs under a microscope and comparing X-rays from normal and tubercular chests.

Luxury For Miner In Strike

ROSS RIVER, Yukon Territory (AP)—Al Kulan doesn't think it the least bit odd that he owns the only Rolls-Royce in the Yukon and the only house in this village with a crystal chandelier.

Kulan is the prospector who made the big strike.

He won't say how many millions he's worth, but he was one of the men who discovered the 63-million-ton lead-and-zinc ore body now being mined near here at Faro by Anvil Mining Corp. Ltd.

For many men, that would have meant instant membership in the jet set or retirement to a South Sea island.

But not for Kulan, who prefers his luxurious, split-level home amidst the Indian log cabins of Ross River—population 220—which is more than 250 miles by gravel road from Whitehorse. As for that Rolls-Royce, Kulan smiled and said: "Everybody should have a Rolls at least once in their life. But you're not a bit happier in a Rolls than a Volkswagen."

"It's useful for driving the Indian stakers around—I can pack them all in—but no one even turns around and looks at it now."

Kulan, 50, was born in Toronto and started prospecting in northern British Columbia and the Yukon in 1946.

The Kulan family spent a short time in Vancouver after Anvil mine connected, but Kulan said "Vancouver just isn't my type of place—it's beautiful but there are too many people."

So a year ago, they moved back to Ross River, and Kulan designed and built his five-bedroom house. The house, with its three cars parked outside, is plush. The red shag carpet fills every corner and echoes the red and gold brocade of the furniture. In the dining room there's a glimpse of a silver candelabra and a crystal chandelier. Chinese antiques are on every shelf and table.

"Money isn't the answer to life," Kulan said. "You think money is going to solve all your problems but when you get it you find it brings a new batch of problems."

Most of the time Kulan still is out prospecting—occasionally taking his sons with him.

"If you've been active all your life it would be most unwise to suddenly change your way of living," he said. "There's no challenge to just sitting around in the South Seas."

Police Calls Totaled 269 In Saugerties

SAUGERTIES During July, the Saugerties Town Police responded to 269 complaints from area residents and four arrests were made, according to a report of Police Chief Robert J. Riley.

Fifteen motor vehicle accidents were reported during the past month, and 43 uniform traffic tickets were issued including seven for speeding violations recorded on radar equipment.

Full-time patrolmen worked a total of 718 hours, and part-time patrolmen worked 319 hours during the month, Riley's report noted. Dispatchers put in 382 hours on their assignment.

Police patrolled a total of 6,168 miles. The chief also noted that a total of $1,062 was paid to the courts by violators.

Caulfield Gets Masonic Honor

WEST SHOKAN Joseph Patrick Caulfield, West Shokan, has been awarded the highest honorary degree in the York Rite of Freemasonry, Knight of the York Cross of Honour.

It is conferred only on those who have held the highest office in each of the four bodies of the rite, and was awarded this year to only about 400 of more than four million Masons.

Caulfield served as Master of Kingston Lodge in 1970; High Priest of Mt. Horeb Chapter, Royal Arch Masons in 1970; Master of Ancient City Council, Royal and Select Masters in 1970; and as Commander of Roundout Commandery, Knight Templar, in 1971.

Ex-General Walker ... Still Has Strong Convictions

By ANDREW A. YEMMA

DALLAS (UPI)—He isn't as GI-sharp in appearance as he used to be—gray hair juts from his chin and upper lip and his hair falls to his collar—but the former two-star Army general sounds the same.

"One time every four years we put some skunk in the White House," said ex-Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker, chain-smoking.

The man the Warren Commission said was the target of a bullet fired by Lee Harvey Oswald before the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, lives in a green, 19th century-style mansion on a fashionable street.

Outside his own political "hermitage" he has erected a large star-spangled sign proclaiming: "Sodom, Gomorrah or Wallace." It is his way of comparing the Democratic and Republican presidential nominees to the Biblical cities of sin and corruption.

"What difference does it make which man we elect president this year? I've already started urging my supporters to sit it out in November," Walker said. "Both the candidates are impossible. There is no choice for the common voter of this country."

Walker's political activities inside his mansion are obscure, and those who get too curious about the general's work have been discouraged from time to time by burly bodyguards at the entrance to the home.

But the onetime fiery voice of right-wing America is by no means a recluse. One of his favorite pastimes is visiting a park near his home which, ironically, is inhabited mainly by the small community of "flower children" of Dallas.

"Do you wonder why the kids are maniacs? Because my age is the biggest disgrace in the world," he said, flailing his arms.

"This country hasn't got any place to fall it's so low. Nixon is the least President we've ever had and the great majority in the Senate are not going to have Nixon beat."

How Many Listen?

Just how much support Walker has in his views is guesswork, but the former military leader is convinced he speaks for the mainstream of the American electorate which he believes is being auctioned to America's "enemies."

Walker entered the national political arena in 1961 when he was pressured into resigning his commission in the U.S. Army for alleged political indoctrination of American troops stationed in Germany.

"I'm the only general in the history of this country to resign with an honorable discharge," Walker said. "There was some admiral way back who resigned his commission but the circumstances were so dissimilar they don't bear repeating. I receive absolutely nothing for a pension and don't owe a cent to anyone."

Walker said his income is based on investments made during and after his Army years.

Following his resignation Walker was in great demand as a speaker at rallies for political groups, especially the John Birch Society.

He entered electoral politics briefly in 1962, campaigning for the Democratic nomination for governor of Texas against five other men including John B. Connally, the eventual winner.

Walker continued his public appearances following his fifth place finish in the Texas primary, and in 1962 he made headlines again—at Oxford, Miss., where the country's first full scale riot over racial integration resulted in the call-out of federal troops.

Walker was arrested, and placed in a federal prison in Springfield, Mo., under charges of inciting to riot.

In prison, federal authorities gave him psychiatric testing. He was labeled a "political prisoner" and such diverse groups as the American Civil Liberties Union and the John Birch Society protested the alleged violation of his constitutional rights.

Landmark Libel Suit

The charges against Walker later were dismissed by a grand jury in Mississippi and Walker filed a landmark libel suit against the Associated Press and several newspapers which carried its report on his involvement at the Oxford riots.

Walker won the initial court rounds but the Supreme Court reversed the decision. The court declared Walker a "public figure" and failed to find a showing of malice in the press accounts of Walker's activities.

"The Supreme Court says I'm the cheapest public figure in the United States," Walker said. "I've got more following per dollar than any of the politicians."

Walker became the target of an assassin's bullet. The widow of Lee Harvey Oswald later told the Warren Commission that her husband fired the shot that missed Walker by inches as he sat in his study in October, 1963—a year after the Oxford riots and a month before the death of John F. Kennedy.

Since 1963 Walker's public appearances have decreased. Today he apparently spends most of his time talking politics among cronies and the curious young people who frequent the park near his Dallas home.

Despite the confrontation of views on such occasions, Walker generally holds youth blameless for the state of the country, which he believes is "at rock bottom."

"What my generation is doing to the young people is an outright disgrace," he said. "The world is getting smaller and smaller and our problems are getting larger and larger. Our country is mortgaged 20 or 30 years ahead. And the responsibility is Nixon's global conquest—isolation is a fake. Our enemies are so close that even the oceans are unfriendly waters."

His Vietnam Position

Conduct of the war in Southeast Asia is equally distasteful to him.

"The war in Vietnam is the greatest victory for the U.S. Senate-U.N. conspiracy this country has ever seen," Walker said. "A full military retreat in defeat of all U.S. soldiers is in truth an impossible situation and a disaster in a military sense and this the public is not allowed to know."

"It is told that Vietnamization is a politically acceptable solution. But there is no political solution that is not based on a military victory."

"The war could have been won in 1967 and certainly Nixon could have won it in 1968," he said.

With what he sees as the "impossible situation" of like candidates, Walker said he will sit out the November election and then "plan for areas unlimited." And he's urged his supporters to do the same.

Who are his supporters? "You look at how many supporters Nixon and McGovern haven't got," Walker said. "And I've got them all."

Ulster Grange Scores at Fair

During the recent Ulster County Fair in New Paltz, Ulster Grange 969 won first prize for its booth. The Junior Grange 542 also won first prize. This makes seven years in a row for them.

Congratulations on work well done have been extended to the children and also Worthy Matron Dottie Winslow.

Da Vinci Collection... Budget Woes

HOBOKEN, N.J. (AP)—A maze of Vinciana housed in the combe, assistant librarian at about a specific topic Leonardo collection, which is housed in monitored to insure optimum protection of the volumes, the oldest of which is a book on architecture written in Latin in 1509, by Paciolo Luca, a contemporary of Leonardo.

The importance of the collection was driven home after World War II. Originals of many of Leonardo's works were destroyed by bombing and shelling. The Nazis looted the museums of Europe and many of Leonardo's manuscripts and drawings were taken. Some never have been found.

About four years ago, archivists in Spain unearthed a set of drawings some scholars have attributed to Leonardo. Widdicombe says Stevens would like to make facsimiles of these works, but the school doesn't have the money it would take for such a project.

At present, the school often is dependent on the good will of scholars to donate books written after using the library's resources.

The collection, donated to the engineering school in 1932, contains facsimiles of everything ever written or drawn by the famous Florentine master, whose 420th anniversary is being celebrated this year.

Although there are no original works by Leonardo in the collection, it's still worth about $1.5 million, since it's probably one of the only places in the world where Leonardo scholars can study his complete works. Some of the books in the collection date from the 16th century.

Although the volumes are available for perusal, Stevens Institute, which had a budget deficit of $500,000 in 1971, doesn't have enough money to hire someone to administer the collection—someone to guide visiting scholars through the Stevens library. "It's extremely frustrating for people who need the collection," says Richard P. Widdicombe, assistant librarian at Stevens Institute.

"We have a catalogue they can use, but if they come here looking for specific information over the world do work at the Stevens Institute."

Rent-A-Beggar Just a Racket in Rio

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—The scene is familiar in big Brazilian cities: a destitute-looking woman and three or four ragged children stretched out on old newspapers beg for money from passing businessmen and foreign tourists.

"For the love of God. A few coins, so my babies can eat..." Don't fail for it, authorities here warn. You may be a sucker for a lucrative, fast-growing "rent-a-beggar" racket, in which calculating adults posing as poor people are taking in more than $30 a day.

Juvenile court officers recently arrested a 34-year-old woman and accused her of running an illegal begging ring in which she used 13 youngsters—ranging from 2 months to 14 years—including two of her own sons.

The woman escaped from detention. The children were turned over to a federal juvenile institution.

The alleged beggar queen had borrowed four of the youngsters from neighbors, authorities said, apparently in exchange for a cut of the take. Officers said she rented seven other children from friends for 80 cents each a day plus lunch.

Rio newspapers estimate 120 adults engage in the "rent-a-beggar" trade in the city.

There have been recent incidents of aggression by rented child beggars. Downtown, pathetic and angelic-looking waifs have been known to turn livid and unleash a string of hard-core curses at passersby who refuse to shell out. One woman had her purse snatched and another had her wristwatch ripped off for failing to pay begging youngsters.

The newspaper Jornal do Brasil called the rent-a-beggar racket a "growing industry" in Rio and described the kind of children it attracts: "They must be actors. They must demonstrate poverty, humility and aggressivity, be daring, calculating, and cold and know how to fake crying so as to play on the public's emotions."

FOR DAD'S SIDE — Illustrating his view that alimony payments can be a tremendous financial drain on the average ex-husband, Paul Hanson, 55, takes stroll in Baltimore, Md., "dressed" in a barrel and shielded by umbrella... perhaps to symbolize that into each life some rain must fall. Hanson, a college professor, is chairman of Fathers United for Equal Rights, a Maryland group protesting the court's treatment of men in divorce cases. (UPI TELEPHOTO)

...MOST A YEAR OLD — The John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D. C. will be one year old Sept. 7 and despite a few official grumbles about vandalism and the management, it has had a highly successful year.

The Center has been so busy that workmen only now are cleaning the walls of the Opera House. They also are changing the 3,247 bulbs in Austria's "starburst" chandelier in the Opera House. (UPI-TELEPHOTO)

Private Enterprise

Indian Involvement Growing

By B. J. MCFARLAND
WARM SPRINGS, Ore. (UPI)—Out here in cowboy and Indian country, the redman has just embarked on a new business venture that may give him greater financial independence than blankets and beads.

The Confederated Tribes of 2,000 Warm Springs, Wasco and Paiute Indians have built and are operating a posh $5.1 million lodge and convention center that takes a back seat to few.

They call this arrowhead-shaped resort Kah-Nee-Ta, one word, meaning "gift of the gods."

The federal government also lent a helping hand to the Indians in this venture of good eating and high living to provide jobs for the Indians.

320 Acres Recovered

The start for the venture came in the middle '50's, after the federal government paid $4 ancestral fishing grounds at Celilo Falls on the Columbia River, inundated by the Dalles Dam reservoir.

In 1958, the late Vernon Jackson, who was tribal council secretary and business manager, initiated a $100,000 study by Oregon State University on the reservation's potential for development. Three years later the Indians, at a cost of $165,000, recovered 320 acres at hot springs on the Warm Springs River. In 1962, the Area Redevelopment Administration made a grant for a feasibility study on developing Kah-Nee-Ta Village—a teepee and cabin resort at the hot springs, and by 1963 the Tribal Council added more than $1 million to the project.

In 1965 plans for the new jobs. Along with sawmill and plywood operations, the elaborate lodge were born and by 1970 the contracts were let for construction. The lodge jobs to fill but only 470 opened this July 4, and already employable Indians. So some of its 90 varying sized rooms and non-Indians or Indians from other parts of the country have been recruited for work at the resort.

though the nearest town of any size, Bend, is 60 miles away.

Dane Manages Lodge

The lodge is entirely a business venture for the Confederated Tribes, Kenneth Smith, 37, tribal general manager and business administrator graduate of the University of Oregon, said. "Except for community welfare and services, our people would not let us pour money into something if it did not make a profit." The Tribal Council approved financial backing because the project would provide 120 to 130 jobs.

The lodge is managed by Herbert Moiler, an unflappable Dane who was born in one of Copenhagen's most distinguished hotels, The Palace, which his grandfather owned and his father managed. The chef, Alfonse J. G. Thomas, wears the gold medal of the Chaine de Rotisseurs—a gourmet group founded in Paris in 1248. Among those he has served are the Duke of Windsor, kings in Belgium, Sweden and Laos, President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Winston Churchill.

BENEFIT BOOK SALE — Members of the Ulster County Council of the Hudson Valley Philharmonic will sponsor their fifth in a series of book sales to benefit the orchestra on September 16 at 254 Albany Avenue, Kingston. Books have been accumulated during the past year and a book store was constructed in the garage of the Ickes residence where the sale was conducted on a regular monthly basis. The September 16 benefit sale is anticipated to be the final one of this year. Additional sales will be conducted next spring with the donation of more books. Donations of books and records may be made at any time at the Albany Ave. address. Pictured preparing for the sale are (L-R) Mrs. Norman Rafalowsky, Catherine Askue, president of the Junior Board of the Philharmonic, and Mrs. William E. Askue. (Freeman photo by Haines)

Women May Sign Up for Course On Auto Mechanics

Women will have an opportunity to learn the intricacies of auto mechanics in a special credit free course being offered in the evening this fall by Ulster County Community College.

Auto Mechanics for Ladies will meet on 10 Monday evenings starting Sept. 18, in Room 602 of the Jacob Hardenbergh Building on the Stone Ridge campus.

Women will be familiarized with the working parts of the automobile and learn how to diagnose and perform simple repairs and become cognizant of when periodic maintenance should be performed.

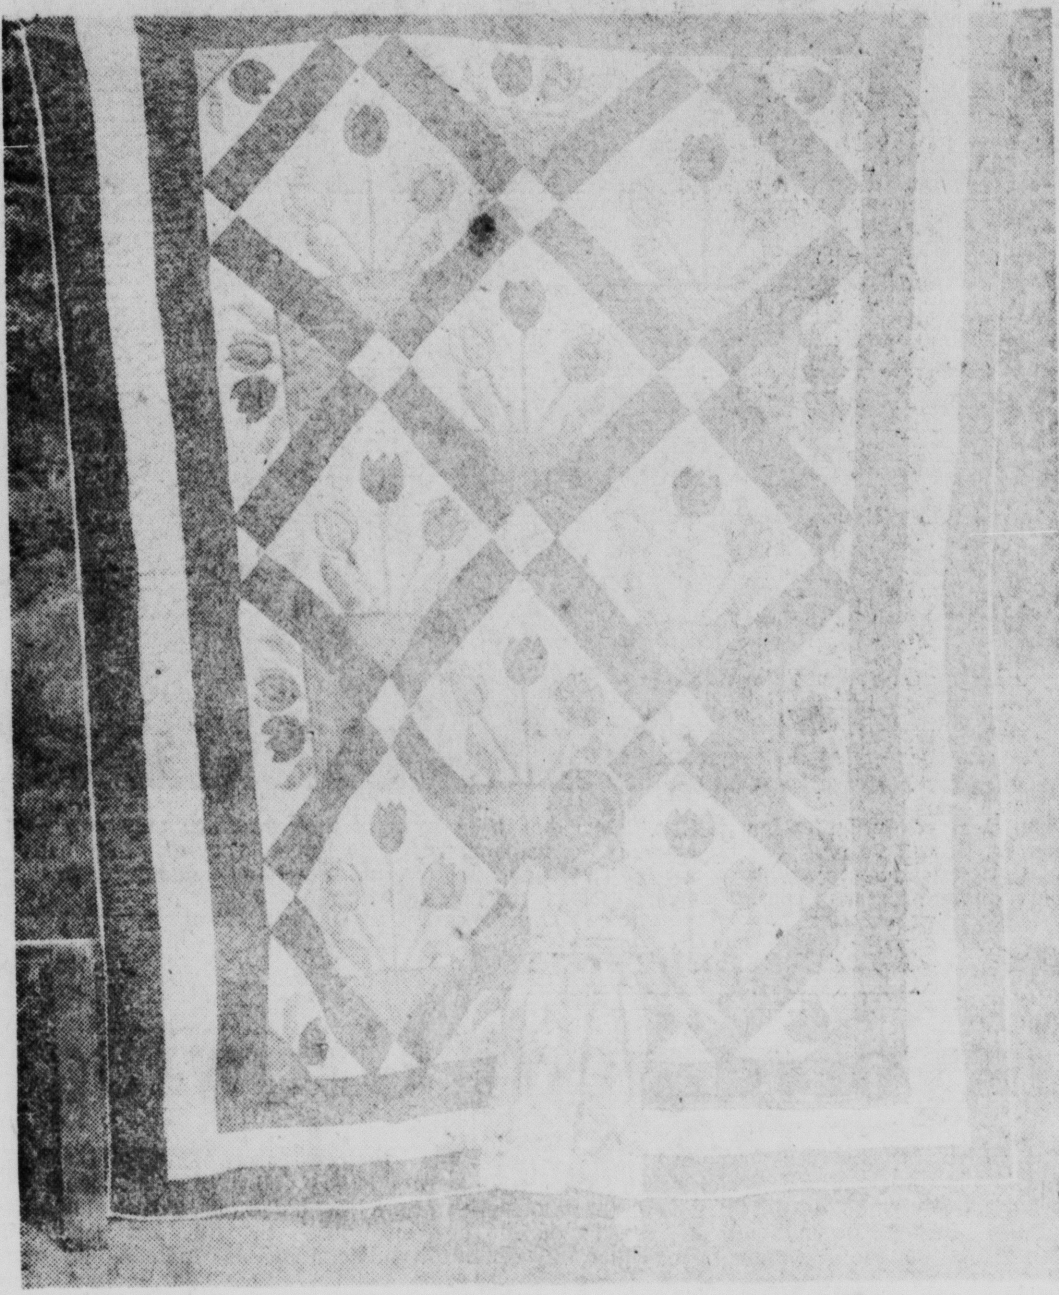

They will also learn conversational automobile language which will enable them to communicate their mechanical problems to the mechanic for correction.

The instructor will be H. Graham Barkhuff, an Industrial Arts teacher who has been employed as a service station attendant, auto mechanic and used car salesman.

Further information about the course can be obtained by calling the Continuing Education Office at the College.

Colorful Effect

Experiment with facial color. Many women can wear blusher several shades darker than their skin complexions. Also, eye color can delve into the pastel areas, with pinks and yellows, as long as a light touch is used. The effect is an uplifting highlighting one.

ANTIQUES SHOW — The Northern Dutchess Hospital Mother's Club will sponsor an antiques show Friday and Saturday, Sept. 8 and 9 on the site of the Dutchess County fairgrounds. Featured will be handmade appliqued quilts. Here, a little miss stands in front of one of the creations. It is a tulip pattern done in the traditional applique style. Another interesting quilt on display will feature a double wedding ring style. Public is invited to attend the benefit show. (Freeman photo by Haines)

Saug. Jaynees Opening Dance School on 16th

The Saugerties Jaynees will be re-opening their dance school on Saturday, Sept. 16, offering classes in tap, ballet, acrobat and modern jazz. The weekly classes of one hour's duration will be opened to students four years of age and older. Classes will be held at the Reformed Church of Saugerties, 173 Main Street.

The school will be directed by Mrs. Rose Fabiano who taught for the Jaynees in 1967 and 1971. Mrs. Fabiano, a former member and secretary of the National Association of Dance and Affiliated Artists, trained and worked at McElroy Studios in Brooklyn for 21 years.

Registration is scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 9 from 10 a.m. to noon at the Reformed Church Parish Hall, 173 Main Street, Saugerties.

Olive Library Sets Date for Benefit Sale

The Friends of the Library of Olive Free Library will hold a rummage sale on Saturday Sept. 16 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Used clothing, household articles, books and miscellaneous items will be featured at this first rummage sale at the new library building on Route 28A in West Shokan.

Chairman Helen Wells requests that articles be left at the library during library hours: 1 to 4 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Plans are currently underway for "Holiday of Handicrafts" a pre-Christmas craft sale to be held the first weekend in December. Town of Olive residents interested in selling handcrafted items at this fair should call the Olive Free Library, West Shokan, or Mrs. Bruce Warden, chairman, for further information.

Tiny Tips

New for Old

After you remove old polish, soak hands in warm water and push back cuticles before applying a fresh coat of nail polish.

Vibrant but Subtle

This fall's make-up has color, but none of the deep heavy look of the '40s that just passed by. Now the color is vibrant, but subtle.

Eyes Go Colorful

The look for eyes is monochromatic. Mascara color complements eyeshadow and eyeliner color. No longer does mascara have to be in basic black and brown. Deep blues, greens, greys and plums have changed all that.

Hide the Truth Dept. Mother Counts Poorly

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
© 1972 by Chicago Tribune.
N. Y. News Synd., Inc.

DEAR ABBY: How do you go about explaining to your mother that no matter how hard she tries she cannot pass off a 16-month-old baby as a 10-month-old infant?

My mother had a very good picture of my 16-month-old son taken with my brother's 10-month-old daughter, and she cut my son off that picture and pasted on a picture of my child taken when he was 9½ months old. She keeps trying to pass off her two grandchildren as the same age because she is ashamed of the fact that I was six months pregnant when I was married.

When will she realize that her too early grandson is not a mark against her, and that all babies are equally precious?

CONDEMNED IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR CONDEMNED: Give her time, Dear, and she will eventually start counting her blessings and quit counting the months.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "SENSITIVE" — the only girl in an office with 18 men. She said she gets so nervous when they make personal remarks on her appearance. They notice when she wears a long skirt or a short one, pants or a dress, and even when she changes her hairdo. And they all have something to say about it.

Well, I also work in a one-girl office. Only there are 20 men in and out of this place all day. It's a taxi cab office. They also notice how I dress and wear my hair and I love it! I'd be hurt if they didn't say anything.

Believe me, it's better than working with a bunch of women who pick you apart when your back is turned.

My friends envy me with this job. I would never work with women again.

TRIED BOTH KINDS

DEAR TRIED: Lucky you! Cab drivers have a reputation for goodhumored kidding, lively rhetoric and quotable comebacks. Better keep your identity to yourself, Kiddo. The Women's Libbers will snatch you baldheaded.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to obtain an impartial opinion in a controversy which arose in my family recently.

My son is married and has two children, a daughter 12, and a son 10. We have always had a good relationship with our son and his wife. She works as a waitress and saves her tips in a small bucket which she keeps on her dresser. It usually contains about $100. My son saves half dollars, which he keeps in a glass jar on his bureau.

My son and his wife leave for work before the children get up for school and the children come to my place for breakfast, as we are neighbors. The children are expected to get their bus fare and lunch money from these jars.

Several weeks ago my daughter-in-law noticed there was about $3.00 missing from her jar. She drove to the ice cream parlor where she found her daughter just leaving after having treated several of her friends. She admitted having taken the money from the jar. My son spanked her good and hard.

I maintain they should not leave the money where the children can help themselves, that their bus fare and lunch money should be laid out for them. My daughter-in-law says she wants to teach them to be trustworthy. My son agrees with her. What is your opinion?

CONCERNED GRANDMOTHER

DEAR GRANDMOTHER: I agree with you. Parents should demand honesty but minimize the temptation.

Problems? Trust Abby. For a personal reply write to ABBY, BOX 69700, L.A., CALIF. 90069 and enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

Doing the Right Thing

Dear Mrs. Post:

When we were married, my husband gave me an engagement and wedding ring set which was very nice, but simple. Now he can afford something finer and wants to buy me a new set for our tenth anniversary.

The original rings were, of course, the symbol of a lifetime together. Would I seem very commercial if I accept a more expensive set of rings? I would love to have them but I'm afraid it would appear that I thought of wedding rings as a symbol of status instead of a symbol of love.

Mrs. Deane

Dear Mrs. Deane:

You need have no hesitation about accepting a new set of rings. The fact that your husband wants to give you one is truly evidence that his love has lasted. Many men enjoy giving their wives something finer as they can afford it. You need not discard your old ring—wear it on your right hand, or if you prefer, use it for everyday wear and put on the new rings when you are dressing up.

Dear Mrs. Post:

Do you think it is advisable for three teenaged girls (seventeen years old) to go for a week's vacation at a seashore, unchaperoned? They are very nice girls, just graduated from high school, but I still think it shouldn't be permitted. With so much going on, it may be dangerous.

Your advice will surely be appreciated.

"GRANDMA SMITH"

Dear "Grandma Smith":

The fact that these girls have graduated from high school is the basis for my answer. The girls, while younger than some high school graduates, are ready for college in the fall. They will not meet any more challenging situations as a threesome at a resort than they will as freshmen at college — possibly with no acquaintances to rely on.

I would say, let them go as long as their families know where they are staying, and they agree to check in with their parents by telephone at agreed-upon intervals.

Spicy wheat germ donuts add nutritional zest to munching favorite.

Spicy Donuts Are Delicious

By AILEEN CLAIRE

Homemade donuts are more than just dessert incidentals. Those made with wheat germ and instant mashed potatoes make a nutritional snack and yet please those with a sweet tooth.

SPICY WHEAT GERM DONUTS

Three and three-quarter cups unsifted flour
Four teaspoons baking powder
Two teaspoons nutmeg
One teaspoon salt
Two-thirds cup wheat germ
Three eggs
One and one-third cups sugar
One and one-quarter cups cold, cooked, sieved instant mashed potatoes (cooked as label directs)
Three tablespoons melted shortening
One and one-half teaspoons vanilla
Three-quarters cup milk
Oil for frying
Confectioners' or cinnamon sugar

Sift first 4 ingredients into bowl. Stir in wheat germ and reserve. Combine eggs, sugar, potatoes, shortening and vanilla in beater bowl. Beat until smooth and a light lemon color. Add 1/2 of the dry ingredients and 1/2 of the milk; mix just until dry ingredients are moistened. Repeat process using remaining dry ingredients and milk. Cover bowl and refrigerate 2 hours or overnight. Roll 1/4 of dough at a time on a lightly floured board to 1/2 inch thickness. Cut donuts using a well-floured sharp donut cutter. Fry a few donuts and donut holes (centers) at a time in hot oil (360 degrees) until done and a golden brown. Turn donuts as soon as they rise to the top of the oil. Brown on underside. Turn and brown on second side. Remove from heat with slotted spoon. Drain and place on paper towel covered tray to drain and cool. When donuts are slightly warm coat with confectioners' sugar or a mixture of cinnamon and sugar by shaking a few donuts at a time in a bag with one-half to two-thirds cup sugar. Arrange sugared donuts on tray to finish cooling. Makes about 2 dozen donuts and donut holes (centers).

(When no deep-fat thermometer is available drop a 1/2 inch bread cube into hot fat. If oil is right temperature the bread will turn a golden brown in 1 minute.)

Back-to-School Ideas

Try Serving Salads

By AILEEN CLAIRE

It's back-to-school time again and this means a re-scheduling of time for all members of the family. Always welcome are quick and nutritious recipes that the youngsters will eat. Fitting into this category are a Quick Pickle Ham Salad and Exotic Pickle Fruit Salad. Both salads are best when chilled and marinated for an hour or so before serving. This means they are good salads to make the night before.

QUICK PICKLE HAM SALAD

One-third cup salad oil
One-half cup sweet pickle liquid
One-quarter teaspoon pepper
One teaspoon dry mustard
One and one-half cups sweet mixed pickles

A Good Yellow Streak CHICAGO (UPI)—Not enough people see red.

That's the reason one major manufacturer of fire trucks is now turning out highly visible lime-yellow ones. Ward LaFrance Truck Corp. started painting fire engines lime yellow after scientific tests showed the color is more visible day or night than the traditional red. The National Safety Council reports this break from the accepted red.

Two-thirds cup finely chopped onion

One cup chopped celery

Two cans (17 ounces each) baby lima beans (or other beans)

Two pounds cooked smoked ham, cut in one-half inch cubes

Blend oil, pickle liquid and seasonings in large bowl; add all remaining ingredients. Toss lightly. Cover and chill several hours. Serve on a bed of lettuce, if desired. Makes 6 to 8 main dish servings. (Canned ham may be used in this recipe.)

EXOTIC PICKLE FRUIT SALAD

Two cans (eight and one-ounces each) pineapple tidbits

Dash salt

One cup drained sweet mixed pickles

Two large red tart apples, cut in chunks

Salad greens

One-third cup chopped pecans

Drain pineapple well, reserving syrup. In large bowl, blend 3 tablespoons pineapple syrup, pickle liquid, ginger and salt; add pineapple, pickles, apples and bananas. Toss lightly. Chill about 1 1/2 hours.

Fats in Your Diet

WHAT CAN FAT DO FOR YOU EXCEPT MAKE YOU FAT?

To function effectively, our system needs fat, says Phyllis W. Barlow, Extension Home Economist.

It is necessary for the absorption and transport of fat soluble vitamins, A, D, E and K.

It provides satiety — delays the onset of hunger.

It provides the essential fatty acids, linoleic and linolenic, which must be present in the diet. The specific functions of the essential fatty acids are still unknown, but infants and young animals fail to grow at a normal rate and sometimes develop a type of dermatitis if these two nutrients are missing.

All common fats contain mixtures of fatty acids but usually one type predominates. In general, fats which are soft or liquid at room temperature like vegetable oils, contain a high proportion of unsaturated fatty acids. However, fats containing a relatively high proportion of some saturated fatty acids are also soft or liquid at room temperature, for example, butter or coconut oil.

Fats which are solid at room temperature, like meat fats, contain primarily saturated fatty acids. These general rules give some indication of the fatty acid composition of a fat but they are not infallible.

The statement that a product is made with vegetable fat rather than animal fat can be misleading since some vegetable fats can be highly saturated. One in particular, coconut oil, is widely used by industry in the manufacture of many non dairy creams, whipped topping, etc. The label usually only indicates vegetable oil as the ingredient.

Coronary heart disease and its possible connection with diet is still an unsolved problem. Present evidence suggests that the general public should follow the time honored concept of moderation in eating practices, including a sensible attitude toward weight control. A diet based on these principles and containing a variety of foods is the best approach to good nutrition.

Chap Protection

To protect lips from chapping and peeling, apply thin coats of medicated chap stick under lipstick or gloss.

On-the-Move Shampoo

Dry shampoo is a great time saver for quickie trips or overnight stays. And you won't have to lug around dryers, curlers or hair spray since dry shampoo cleans without causing the hair to lose its style.

Hints from Heloise

By HELOISE CRUISE
BLUE MONDAY IS BLEACHED OUT

Dear Heloise:

Today I was as lazy as ever could be... doing only what had to be done, you see. I baked no pies, no cakes, no bread. I didn't even make the bed.

"What did she do?" I hear you say. I pampered myself this special day.

Reading lines by the score — searching myself to the core. Rested some, and called a friend and as the day drew to an end, I was fulfilled, relaxed, serene — ready for tomorrow's scene. Cooking, cleaning, washing, shopping, — working, working, without stopping.

When I am weary or feel glum, I keep remembering my day will come.

Every Monday, if you haven't guessed — some call it blue — I call it blessed.

Are you wondering why I choose Monday? Because it follows Saturday and Sunday.

Ruby Threewit
... Ok, that's good enough for me!
Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I was given a very pretty three-tiered candy or cookie dish as a gift, and, since we don't eat sweets at our house, I decided to find another use for it. It was just too pretty to store away.

It is now on my end table next to my favorite chair and is used for needles, pins, yarn markers, and whatever else I'm always misplacing when sewing or knitting.

Mrs. Jean S.

Dear Heloise:

When I buy laundry detergent I always buy it in the large 10-pound box size.

This is very economical but it does have its drawbacks. Have you ever tried to open one of those boxes?

I found the perfect opener. It's a small gardening spade, called a trowel.

It just fits the perforated semi-circle you're supposed to push in.

Your Fan

Dear Heloise:

When I use both of my pressure cookers at the same time, I always mark the time it should be under pressure on each cooker lid with a piece of chalk.

Sure eases my mind and saves time and mistakes.

Mary L.

Dear Heloise:

Everyone has her own special way of putting on panty hose, but this is the way I don mine and I think it might have a certain appeal for the heavy ladies especially.

To put on your panty hose go to your bathroom and turn your back to the tub. Stand about four inches away from the tub.

Lift your right leg and rest your heel on the tub. Proceed with the hose. Straighten out the foot part, then work the hose up over the knee, lowering your leg to the floor. Do the other leg the same way.

Now, isn't that easy?

Elizabeth D'ceno

Dear Heloise: A flexible rubber spatula is just great to separate slices of bacon without tearing the bacon.

Give it a try the next time you run into that problem.

Mrs. Orville Schwanke

First College Grid Tests on Saturday

NEW YORK (AP) — Will Nebraska get off on the right foot in its quest for an unprecedented third consecutive national championship?

Is second-ranked Colorado strong enough to overtake the Cornhuskers?

Will Southern California or Arkansas bite the dust in the first match-up of Top Ten teams?

Who'll win out in the American League East?

Oops, wrong sport. The sport we're concerned with is college football, which will start answering some of the first four questions when the 1972 season gets under way this weekend.

We'll try to answer some in advance with the first selections of the year. Last year's regular-season record had enough right answers for a .720 percentage.

Nebraska at UCLA—The Cornhuskers have a 23-game winning streak and an unbeaten string of 32 games and they know that if they want that third national crown UCLA better stand for U-Can't-Lose-Any, Nebraska. Has dropped both previous meetings with the Bruins, but those games were in 1946 and 1948. This is 1972, Nebraska.

California at Colorado—Hmmm. Did you know that Colorado has never beaten California, losing the only clash in 1968? That should change, too. Colorado.

Southern California at Arkansas—Southern Cal has never beaten Arkansas, if you must know. Of course, Arkansas has never beaten Southern Cal. In fact, this is their first meeting and it should be quite a start.

Arkansas hopes to ride Joe Ferguson's strong right arm to the national championship but the suspicion exists in this corner that John McKay may be building a powerhouse out in ... Southern California.

Toledo at Tampa—Wouldn't it be a scintillating debut for Tampa if the Spartans debuted as a major football school by ending Toledo's three-year winning streak? It would, and it says there they will, Tampa.

Duke at Alabama—Alabama came within one game—that 38-6 loss to Nebraska in the Orange Bowl—of the 1971 national title, but it pretty much of a surprise. Bear Bryant was pointing toward 1972 as the year the Crimson Tide rolled in ... Alabama.

Tennessee at Georgia Tech—The Rambling Wreck put up quite a struggle last season before bowing 10-6 and they'd like to make Bill Fulcher a winner in his first game as Tech's fifth coach in history. This is the first TV game of the season. Keep your eye on ... Tennessee.

Florida State at Pitt—Florida State's pass-happy Gary Huff against Pitt's new Wishbone ground game. Pitt is suspect on defense, which means Huff could have a field day. Florida State.

Houston at Rice—Rice almost caught Houston looking ahead to Arizona State a year ago but the Cougars prevailed 23-21. The same situation exists this time ... with the same result. Houston.

Temple at Syracuse—In its second year as a major football school, Temple could be the surprise team in the East. So, for that matter, could ... Syracuse.

Auburn at Mississippi State—What will Auburn do without Pat Sullivan and Terry Beasley? Lose, most likely. Mississippi State.

Falcons Acquire Speedster Hampton

By United Press International
Dave Hampton, who ranked third in the National Football Conference in kickoff returns last season while with Green Bay, was acquired Tuesday by the Atlanta Falcons on a day which saw NFL teams trim down to the current roster limit of 4 players.

Hampton, a fourth-year player out of Wyoming, where he was a teammate of the Miami Dolphins' Jim Kiick, was sent to the Falcons in exchange for starting offensive tackle Malcolm Snider, also a fourth-year man.

Hampton, a 6-foot-0, 210-pound running back, returned 46 kickoffs last season for 1,314 yards and a 28.6 return average. He ranked behind Travis Williams of Los Angeles and Ron Jessie of Detroit among NFC kickoff returning specialists, but his 46 returns were the most of anyone in the conference.

Hampton also rushed for 303 yards and two touchdowns in 67 attempts for the Packers, a 4.5-yard average.

Snider is a durable performer who missed only one regular season game in three years at Atlanta. The 6-foot-4, 250-pounder was the Falcons' third-round draft pick out of Stanford in 1969.

The Packers also swung a deal with the World Champion Dallas Cowboys, receiving punter Ron Widby and defensive back Ike Thomas in exchange for a high 1973 draft choice.

Widby was replaced as the Cowboys' punting specialist by NCAA record-holder Marv Bateman of Utah, who has averaged 43.3 yards for 10 exhibition-season boots.

Thomas had some spectacular moments last year, returning the opening kickoff 89 yards for touchdowns on two successive weekends, but he couldn't win a regular berth among the Super Bowl titlists.

The Lions, seeking help for their receiving corps after Charlie Sanders' shoulder injury last weekend, picked up seven-year pro John Hilton from the Washington Redskins in exchange for a draft choice.

Detroit then traded running back Paul Gipson to St. Louis for linebacker Rick Ogle.

San Diego Coach Harland Svare broke the record for making deals set just last season by George Allen of Washington when Svare acquired defensive back Leonard Dunlop from the Baltimore Colts in exchange for an undisclosed draft choice. It was the 20th transaction completed by Svare in his eight months at the San Diego helm and snapped by an Allen's trading record.

Dennis Homan, a five-year veteran, headed the list of cuts made by the Kansas City Chiefs, who also released cornerback David Hadley, a three-year player, seven-year pro Andy Rice and rookie kicker Jeff White and placed three more players on the injured waiver list, including running back Warren McVea.

The Pittsburgh Steelers placed eight men on waivers Tuesday, but withheld identification until today.

Cougars Settle For $500,000

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Carolina Cougars of the American Basketball Association have agreed to accept in excess of $500,000 from the Seattle SuperSonics of the National Basketball Association in settlement of a contract dispute involving player Jim McDaniels.

The Cougars' information director, Ted Malick, said agreement was reached Tuesday morning, freeing the former standout at Western Kentucky to play with Seattle.

The settlement also means that a half dozen suits and countersuits involving the two teams and two leagues will be dropped, Malick said.

No official terms of the settlement were released but "it is believed to have been ... in excess of $500,000," Malick said.

McDaniels left the Cougars last February and signed with Seattle.

Malick said it was not immediately disclosed if the settlement involved more than cash.

'First Place' Baltimore Sinks to Fourth Spot

By United Press International

The Baltimore Orioles, who are accustomed to being in first place, aren't even in the first division today.

The three-time defending American League champions slipped to fourth place Tuesday night when they were beaten by the New York Yankees 7-6 as a three-run rally in the ninth inning fell a run short.

Of course, the Orioles are only a game off the pace in the hectic race but they're still fourth while Detroit leads and New York and Boston are tied for second a half game back.

The rally was that fell short was symptomatic of the Oriole problems this year. Famed for their ninth-inning rallies in the past, Baltimore has come from behind to win in the ninth inning only once all season.

Earl Weaver, the Baltimore manager who has suffered through the long season, just shrugged and said, "what can you say, you either make the plays or you don't."

And the Orioles don't even seem to have the consolation of strong backing from their fans. Even though the race is close, the fans have been staying away and even the series opening tonight in Baltimore against Detroit isn't expected to draw any record crowds.

Detroit's outspoken manager Billy Martin has his own theory on the reason for the poor support.

"It's those sportswriters," Martin said. "The way they knock them, it's no wonder the people don't come out. We may even outnumber them what with our extra players and all."

But then managers like to blame sportswriters for all kinds of ills.

In the other games, Detroit topped Cleveland 4-2 to take over first place. Boston stayed in the thick of it with a 5-3 win over Milwaukee. Kansas City beat Texas 7-2 and Chicago downed Minnesota 5-2.

Baltimore's Dave McNally slipped to 14-13 as he was bombed by New York for five runs in the first inning. Rookie Charlie Spikes' two-run double highlighted the rally. Baltimore eventually scored six runs—including three in the ninth and six runs would have avoided 12 of his losses. But when he got the support, he had an off night.

Sparky Lyle, who staggered to his 31st save as he was touched for two hits and two runs, thinks the Yanks are being overlooked. "Everybody underestimates the Yanks. That's because they say we have no superstars. I think that's just a bunch of nonsense," he said. "You even have to figure the schedule favors us at the end."

Eddie Brinkman, batting just

.204, singled home a pair of fifth inning runs to pace Detroit over Cleveland. Joe Coleman won his 15th game with a six-hitter while Ray Lamb took the loss.

Reggie Smith's three-run homer in the eighth inning started a four-run rally and gave Boston the victory over Milwaukee. Skip Lockwood was the victor of the uprising while Gary Peters won in relief of Marty Pattin.

Chicago picked up a half-game on idle Oakland in the Western Division with the victory over Minnesota. Pinch-hitter Tony Muser lined a tie-breaking double with two out in the seventh inning to pace the team. Harmon Killebrew hit his 537th homer in the losing cause. Rookie Dave Wohlford and veteran Paul Schaaf each collected three hits in Kansas City's victory over Texas. Lou Piniella's two-run double in the first inning highlighted a three-run rally against loser Rich Hand.

Experienced Ellenville Plans UCAL Shakeup

By STEVE KANE

ELLENVILLE

The UCAL is in for a big shakeup this year. One of the reasons is Dave Frank's Ellenville High School football team which finished the 1971 season in last place with a 1-8 record.

"Last year our biggest problem was offensive inexperience," said the Ellies' coach, "but with everyone back we should come along nicely."

Almost everyone is back in Ellenville. Nine of last year's offensive starters, including an intact backfield, figure heavily in Frank's hopes for the future. All-UCAL pick Bob Pensa heads the list, but the quality by no means stops there.

Junior Stan Foo, at 6-2, 195, the squad's biggest man, anchors the line at tackle. If he seems small, his times in the hurdles during track season make him especially dangerous at his defensive end position. Speed, in fact, is well distributed in the Ellies' camp. Fullback Gary Wilhelm, tailback Keith Trappnell, wingback Steve Tennenbaum and split end Ray Younger are as fast as four some as any in the league.

Kyle Hoar, a senior, will direct the attack this year. One of his receivers will be Ron Storms, a 5-11, 190-pound tight end. Senior Mark Garrison will handle the centering chores.

Storms and Kevin Trappnell, a sophomore guard, shape up as the two non-veteran starters on the Ellenville offense.

"We'll work out of a slot-I formation, and play a 6-2 team defense," said Frank. "We've never been big enough to knock heads with anybody, so we have to have lots of pursuit and gang tackles."

Pensa, starting his fourth year with the Blue Devils, will pair with newcomer Angelo Cappazoli at the linebacker spots. A few positions are open still on the forward wall, but Foo and Storms look good for the ends with Steve Jargowski, a 180-pound junior, and Tony Del Gaizo, a 190-pound sophomore, somewhere in between. Tennenbaum, Younger and Dave Stanton give the Ellies a solid secondary.

A big factor to be considered is the extra talents of Tennenbaum. He kicks field goals. "We didn't have any confidence in him until about mid-way through last season," Frank said. "But he'll handle all our extra points, and he's accurate from about 25 yards in."

Last season, the Ellies' only win came when a Tennenbaum boot pushed them past a surprised Rondout team in the closing minutes of the game.

Frank commented on how the league looks from the pre-season view: "This year most teams were hurt more than us by graduation. The Monroes and Barrington are gone, at Highland Ackerly and Williams left New Paltz. Brown left Onteora, in fact just about all the good quarterbacks are gone. I thought the UCAL had good balance last year, but this season a team can lose two games and still win it all."

The most severe blow to the Ellies came with the absence of Herman Pinque. A strong 220-pounder, Pinque was to have been the hub of the defense, but knee surgery following a basketball accident will have him out most of the season. "He was our best defensive lineman," said Frank, "but now he may only possibly play late in the season."

Frank is now in his sixth year as Ellenville head football coach. Assisting him are fifth year line coach Pete Meoli, JV coach Jack Sovak and JV assistant and scout, Mark Ellison. About 50 candidates turned out for this year's team.

The schedule:

uels, Bill Haber, Mike Elgo and Joel Sickler. Standing: Joe The coaches are unidentified. Sicklers-KT won the crown with a 5-4 victory over the Rotary team in the finals.

Paul Coon Victorious In Twaalfskill's First Flight

KINGSTON Paul Coon defeated Roy Reid, 3 and 2, in the 36-hole finals of The Twaalfskill Club's First Flight. Coon eliminated Tom Glynn, 3 and 1, in semi-final play, while Reid won 2-up over Dr. Douw Meyers.

In first round play, Glynn won over B. Bechtold, 2 up; Coon nipped Dr. Michael Diacovo, 1 up; Dr. Meyers won from Red Timmins and Reid checked Saccaman, 2 and 1.

Dennis Pitcock defeated Dr. Robert F. Moseley, 1 up, in the Second Flight 36-hole finals. Enroute to the finals, Pitcock had to go 19 holes to defeat Charlie Montafia, before eliminating Dr. Milton Grover, 1 up. Dr. Moseley edged Charles Higgins, 2 and 1, before topping William Merrill by the same margin. In other matches, Dr. Grover won over Basil Mochowsky, 3 and 2 and Merrill tripped Bud Potter, 4 and 3.

Danny Bernard was the biggest winner in the 36-hole playoffs, routing William Kuehn, 8 and 7, in the Third Flight finals.

Bernard gained the finals by drawing a first-round bye, then beating Brian Feeney in the semi-finals. Kuehn ousted Art Larsen, 6 and 4, and then beat Jack Gilligan.

In first round play, Feeney checked Dr. Pugliese 2 and 1 and Gilligan was a 2 and 1 winner over H. Lindberg.

David Hoffman was also a big

Potter, 7 and 5, for the Fourth Flight title. Hoffman opened with a 5 and 3 win over William Golden and he had to go 19 holes to nip Tom Feeney, 1 up.

Potter got a forfeit from Nick Morris and then topped John McGarrym 2 and 1. In first round play, McGarry drew a

Tests Prove Rumors False

MIAMI (UPI) — Extensive tests of six Thoroughbreds at Calder race course produced negative results Tuesday, dispelling rumors that horses had been tranquilized at the track on the Labor Day program.

The division of parimutuel wagering's laboratory, one of the finest in the country, revealed the results of blood and urine tests.

Both George Johnson, the division's director, and Dan MacPherson, its chief investigator, attacked the publication of the doping rumors before tests were made.

"This type of thing puts a knock on Thoroughbred racing which it doesn't deserve," said Johnson.

Hunter Adds New Mountain

HUNTER Two years ago, Hunter Mountain Ski Bowl, the northern Catskill's major ski resort, opened a new ski area — Hunter West. As an event in itself, it was noteworthy because it brought big mountain skiing to New York State. The trails are all rated for top expert, and in combination with Hunter's K-27 challenger, it has provided hours of thrilling skiing for those talented enough to ski it.

When Hunter West was created, it was introduced as a separate ski area. Despite the fact that the same lift ticket entitled skiers to use its facilities as well as all of the facilities at Hunter Mountain, it has always been thought of as a distinct entity.

And indeed it is. Separated by a mountain crest, and angling steeply down the tree-shrouded mountain, it gives the impression of being a wilderness area. Actually, it is very close to Hunter itself, and its legion of loyal ski bugs.

The introduction of Hunter West made an ideal playground for experts and the subsequent opening of the Summit Lodge (The Castle in the Clouds) made trails, with a few lower intermediate trails. It will become use it. Hunter One includes most of the beginner and novice it unnecessary for those skiers to come down the mountain, thereby easing the front-face lift lines, and allowing the better skiers to remain up on the mountain all day.

So now there was a place for the experts, and the rest of Hunter Mountain. And it was time to change that as well.

For the 1972-73 ski season, Hunter One has been created. Hunter Mountain will now become a three-mountain complex. To begin with, a new double chairlift, a new major beginner's slope, additional trails, and miles of new snowmaking will turn the old "beginners area" into a new and unique separate ski area for beginners and novice skiers.

Hunter One, which will boast seven lifts and tows, will be bigger than seventy five per cent of New York ski areas, and it is only one-third of the Hunter Complex.

Psychologically, the re-naming of that area as Hunter One, and the separation of it into a ski area by itself, will mean much to the skiers who the place for the neophyte skiers to ski with those of equal ability — and a place to "graduate" from when the skills have been sharpened.

Hunter Mountain's three-mountain complex will boast sixteen lifts and tows for the 1972-73 ski season, with an uphill capacity of more than 14,000 skiers per hour. Snowmaking on New York's big mountain will be increased by fifty per cent, and a major grooming, beautification and crowd-control program is being conducted.

Patterson-Ali Bout On Monticello TV

"I could fight for a long time against meaningless opponents," said the former two time world champion, "but this is the big step for me. This is the one that counts. This is the one that brings me all the way back. This is the chance I've been waiting for."

The speaker is Floyd Patterson. The big chance is a 12 round heavyweight bout with a nother former champion, Muhammad Ali. The winner will be the next to face current champion, Joe Frazier. The bout along with a 10 round non title lightweight slug fest between Roberto Duran and Carlos Ortiz, will be televised on 40 closed circuit color TVs at Monticello Raceway September 20th. The only charge for the fistfuffs will be regular raceway admission. There will be no additional charge.

"This fight fits right into my blueprint," Patterson continued. He's won nine in a row in a "comeback" that includes a decisive victory over Oscar Bonavena, the Buenos Aires bull, earlier this year.

Ali, as is his custom, has been shooting off at the mouth about what he will do to Patterson, but behind the scenes he has cancelled a four country exhibition tour and has turned down thousands of dollars to serve as a commentator for the boxing events at the Olympics in Munich. Instead he has gone into serious training for the Patterson fight at his Deer Lake, Pa. training camp.

"Patterson is not those other fellas. Quarry and Chuvalo and Terrel and most of those other fellas were targets. When you throw them are there. Patterson moves, around, uses the ring. He's hard to hit. You've got to be in good shape to fight him or he might steal the fight away from you. Bonavena found that out. I gotta be 215 pounds for this fight, otherwise I'm in trouble."

Makes Her Expenses

OLD WESTBURY, N.Y. (AP) — You might say Sharon Miller of Battle Creek, Mich., earned enough for two weeks on the Ladies PGA golf tour when she shot a 72 to win the fifth annual Old Westbury Golf and Country Club pro-am member 18-hole event. She earned $445 by her victory.

Sue Roberts of Columbus, Ohio was second with a 73 and won $375. Mary Mills of Gulfport, Miss., shot a 78 on her own ball but her three amateurs helped the team to a net 55. Sh. played with Norma Rosenblatt, Henry Rothman and Fred Gelberg.

Sugar Bowl Pairings

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — National collegiate champion UCLA will play Drake's Bulldogs and the Temple Owls will take on Illinois in the first round of the Sugar Bowl basketball tournament in New Orleans. The twin bill is set for Friday night, Dec. 29.

Your Horoscope

Thursday, September 7

GENERAL TENDENCIES: All to July 21) Much care in motion day to force nothing of any type or description. Quietly, in a steadfast fashion, wind up and complete what has been in motion. Benefits will come later. Look at your surroundings and put them in perfect working order.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Listen carefully to any complaints co-workers may have. Strive to bring about more harmony at home. Take health treatments. Evening is best spent at home relaxing.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Working on creative ideas is good but going off on recreational activities that are too expensive is not. Come to a better understanding with mate. Show that you are thoughtful.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Relieve the tense condition at home by handling personal matters in a most thoughtful fashion. Smile more and avoid arguments. Think along more affluent lines. Be wise.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Much care in motion will be a safeguard against trouble tonight. Go over any writings or reports for possible errors. Make your meaning clear. Relax tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You think if you spend more money you can easily gain your aims, but this is not true now. Don't commit yourself financially or there could be serious repercussions. Be patient.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Take whatever treatments will help you gain more energy now. Not a good day to attend a social affair. Ask for a rain-check and avoid possible danger. Take it easy tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take whatever treatments will help you gain more energy now. Not a good day to attend a social affair. Ask for a rain-check and avoid possible danger. Take it easy tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make sure you handle duties that are important before you get into the specifics of a new plan you have in mind. You are able to help a friend who is having a troublesome time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Give others the benefit of the doubt and have better relations with associates. Try not to argue with others and rest when you feel tired. Evening is fine for watching television.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY—he or she will be one of those young people who loves to solve problems and will even create some in order to show ability at so doing. Give as fine an education as you can, stressing the practical. Give ethical training and spiritual knowledge early. Sports are a must here.

MURPHY'S WAR

Rosemary Murphy is going all out to make the world Rosemary Murphy-conscious. Phase One in the campaign is to make a concerted effort to appear in movies.

Miss Murphy is a much-honored Broadway actress. But she found that Broadway was self-limiting.

"I'd gone pretty far on Broadway," she says, "and I did top parts in top plays for five years. And I still wasn't a name. So I decided to try Hollywood and movies."

She's in "Ben," and it's doing well at the box office but but she'd rather forget it. She's featured in "Ace Eli and Rodger of the Skies" with Cliff Robertson. And he thinks her best film role is in "You'll Like My Mother," with Patty Duke. Besides, she has done a bunch of TV roles—in Cannon and Banyon, for example.

So the campaign is bearing fruit and she's settling in Hollywood—bought a house, her very first—and likes it here.

She's the daughter of career diplomat Robert Murphy, once undersecretary of state, and grew up in Paris and, after the war, Berlin. She speaks French fluently and German with a French accent, she says.

Being the daughter of someone in the public eye meant, she says, that her behavior always had to be circumspect. She remembers once at a New York beach she was in a brand new bikini and "so glad I was enough to wear it."

A policeman came over and said he'd have to arrest her for indecent exposure. Rosemary said she panicked. "I could just see the headlines: 'Diplomat's Daughter Shows Too Much on Beach.' But I managed to talk him out of arresting me."

Her parents, at first, opposed her acting ambitions. She thinks their reasons were purely protective. They thought it was too tough a life.

"But my father has mellowed with age. He's 77," she says. "I think he's very proud of me now."

TEEN FORUM

MISTAKES: (Q.) I am 15 and I am pretty cute. I used to go out with a lot of guys. I let them do anything they wanted to. I quit because the other kids started calling me a tramp. Do you think I am a tramp?—Criticized in Connecticut.

(A.) No. You made some mistakes but you woke up to the fact that they were mistakes and now you are not making them.

There are many, many happy wives and mothers who made your mistake when they were teen-agers but found out in time that what they were doing was not the right thing to do.

I'm glad you found out in time. It will take some more time for the other teen-agers to see by your actions and your attitude that you have changed. When they do see, the name calling will stop. In the meantime just smile and walk forward with your head up.

SHE CRIES: (Q.) I am sensitive. What I mean is that I cry easy. When my friends make jokes about me I cry. I try to laugh but I cry. Please help me. I am 13.—Too Many Tears in Texas.

(A.) We are all sensitive. None of us likes to be laughed at, even in fun. Some of us are less sensitive than others and can "tough it out." But most of us have to train ourselves not to show how sensitive we are. how much little things hurt us.

You are working at training yourself. You are trying to laugh. Keep trying. You can do it. I think knowing that others are sensitive, too, will help you.

When someone makes a joke about you, tell yourself you can cry later—in private—but that you will laugh now.

Another Late Hour Show

Television in Review
By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD UPI — Those fellows at the television network just won't let a viewer get a decent night's sleep. First came the late-night talk shows—now represented by Johnny Carson and Dick Cavett—that run until 1 a.m. EDT. Then CBS-TV dumped Merv Griffin, its competitor for Carson and Cavett, and put on coast-to-coast movies that sometimes run even later. Now NBC-TV is talking about a nightly (or, rather, early-morning) talk show that would follow its Carson series and might start by next spring, according to a top network executive. The show, which would be called "Tomorrow," would be an hour in length. It would run from 1 to 2 a.m. in the East and West and an hour earlier in the nation's midsection. Carson's show is entitled "Tonight." And of course the same network also has the morning "Today" series. So if the new concept comes to fruition, NBC-TV would be able to offer "Today," "Tonight" and "Tomorrow."

Well, for heaven's sake, why Carson and Cavett, and put on coast-to-coast movies that sometimes run even later. Besides the government cut-out, other rock concerts, Network back on prime time affected people think young people will network income adversely. And watch video late. And there are so there was a logical need for people who work odd hours and networks to look for what are up then too. "Variety," in its story on "Tomorrow," calls a "new talk show—can be done cheap. And then, not long ago, NBC-TV ran a rock concert that tising revenue should make it a followed the "Tonight" show money maker and create that and urged young viewers to get new profit center. Conspiracy Charges Dropped In Alleged Kidnap-Kissinger Plot

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — The government dropped conspiracy charges against the Harrisburg Seven Tuesday, conceding defeat in its 20-month battle to convict the Rev. Philip F. Berrigan of masterminding an antiwar plot to kidnap Henry A. Kissinger.

The decision came as U. S. District Court Judge R. Dixon Herman sentenced the 49-year-old Josephite priest to two years in prison for smuggling letters out of a federal penitentiary in 1970.

Eight Killed in Accidental Strafing

SAIGON (UPI)—Two U.S. Navy jets collided over North Vietnam, American fighter-bombers mistakenly strafed South Vietnamese civilians, and, in a third widely separated accident two U.S. soldiers were wounded by their own unit's mortar fire, military spokesmen said today.

In the accidental strafing, eight South Vietnamese civilians were killed and five others were wounded.

The two Navy jets, an F8 Crusader fighter-bomber and an RF8 reconnaissance plane, collided over the Gulf of Tonkin while the F8 was being refueled aloft about 30 miles offshore from Thanh Hoa at the northern end of the North Vietnamese panhandle.

The two planes crashed after their pilots ejected. Both parachuted into the sea and were rescued unharmed. The tail of the refueling plane, a command said. The accident is being investigated.

The Vietnamese civilian casualties resulted when two U.S. Marine A4 Skyhawk fighter-bombers strafed them accidentally during anti-guerrilla operations in the Mekong Delta, 75 miles southwest of Saigon.

In the third accident, two U.S. perimeter guards at Camp Holloway, an American helicopter base 230 miles north of Saigon in the Central Highlands, were wounded by mortar fire from their own unit shortly before midnight.

"The mortar rounds were fired in response to a possible enemy probe detected in the vicinity of the position," the command said. "The incident is under investigation."

A third American was wounded by mortar fire Tuesday but not by accident. He was a U.S. Marine adviser to a South Vietnamese marine unit that was hit by mortars at

Impeachment Committee Must File Finance Report

NEW YORK (AP) — A committee seeking to impeach President Nixon for his handling of the Vietnam war must file a financial report listing its expenditures and contributions before it spends or raises any more money, a federal judge has ruled.

U.S. District Court Judge Sylvester J. Ryan ordered a temporary injunction against the National Committee for Impeachment, ruling that the group was a political committee and thus subject to the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971.

Ryan's decision Tuesday marked the first government action under the campaign law. Paul G. Chevigny, an American Civil Liberties Union lawyer representing the committee, planned to appeal the ruling.

The government's action stemmed from a controversial two-page ad placed by the committee in the New York Times on May 31.

The committee argued that prospective donors would be intimidated if the committee were forced to file financial

AFL-CIO Spokesman Scores School Credit Proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An AFL-CIO spokesman today denounced a proposal to provide tax credits for private and religious schools as a "virtual invitation to segregationists."

Andrew J. Biemiller, director of the 13.6 million-member labor organization's department of legislation, told the House Ways and Means Committee created to avoid desegregation. "Given the persistent efforts by some states to subsidize tuition payments to racially segregated schools, we find it altogether incredible that there is no guarantee against segregated education" in the bill, the spokesman said.

He said the legislation "constitutes a virtual invitation to segregationists to avail themselves of the tax benefits."

Biemiller said the rebates would lead to a drain on the federal treasury of "in excess" of $1 billion a year.

Researchers Announce Monitoring Method for Heart

BOSTON (AP) — Boston researchers have announced a new method of monitoring heart rates of fetuses which they say can indicate how well a baby will survive the rigors of birth.

The method was developed by researchers at Boston Hospital for Women and the Brattle Instrument Corp. of Cambridge.

Dr. John M. Leventhal, director of the hospital's fetal heart-rate monitoring program, said effective on an even younger Tuesday the method uses a device with computer circuitry which can detect, filter, analyze and amplify the weak heart rates presently used by electrical impulses from the fetal heart through the mother's skin.

"We have been able to use this method as early as the 26th week of pregnancy," Leventhal said. "We haven't tried it at an unborn child. The second method earlier stage because this is done away with the complications of rupturing uterine membranes by applying an ultrasonic device to the mother's abdomen and counting fetal heartbeats by following the motion of the fetal brain. Heart rates change when the fetus' head is compressed with uterine contractions, when the baby's head compresses the umbilical cord and after the peak of uterine contraction.

Since the supply of blood and oxygen to the brain is a major factor in brain damage at birth, being able to monitor brain oxygenation through heart rate during labor would give physicians a chance to take corrective measures if something went wrong.

He said the new method can distinguish the three major heart rate patterns which are detectable during labor, all of

Congress Scraps Efforts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bending to President Nixon's will, Congress has scrapped efforts to grant independent status to the government's legal-services program for the poor.

The reforms pushed by congressional liberals were stricken from a $4.7-billion anti-poverty bill which both houses passed Tuesday and sent to the President. The measure was approved by a 223-97 vote in the House and by voice vote in the Senate.

House and Senate conferees lopped off $1.4 billion from the original legislation after Nixon objected to the higher sum. As finally passed, the bill authorizes $2.3 billion for the current fiscal year and $2.4 billion for fiscal 1974.

The White House had let it be known that Nixon would veto the bill if it came to his desk with the legal-services provisions in the form sponsors wanted.

The President had endorsed the notion of loosening the legal-services program from the Office of Economic Opportunity and organizing it as an independent corporation, but only if he were given the power to appoint all its directors with no strings attached.

Conferees said they preferred to drop the effort rather than give Nixon total control of the board.

The Senate managers of the bill, Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., and Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said they would renew the reform effort next year.

This action leaves the legal-services program under OEO control.

Governors retain veto power over OEO activities, including legal services, in their states.

Defeat of the reform move was a victory for conservatives, including several governors who objected to suits inspired by legal-services lawyers challenging such state government practices as welfare administration.
